Soil, Produce &c.—The agricultural properties of Nairnshire assimilate closely with those of the county of Elgin. Exclusive of the hilly part of the district, it may be described as a narrow border of level ground, along the shore of the Firth, from 1 to nearly 6 miles in breadth—and here for the most part it is arable; but as the county recedes further from the coast, it becomes bleak and hilly; there are, however, no eminences of great altitude or note. The farms are usually small, and most frequently uninclosed. Sheep and black cattle are reared in considerable numbers, and chiefly fed on the natural pasture. From the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," the chief crops are shown as follows:—Oats, 6,354 acres; wheat, 25; barley, including bere, 2,465; rye, 30; total corn crops, 8,891; turnips and swedes, 3,895 acres; potatoes, 288; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 21; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 1,487 acres; pasture (not for hay), 8,816. The total area of land is 104,252 acres, of which 48,500 are mountain and heath land used for grazing; 1,956 permanent pasture; 23,485 arable land. The live stock in 1920 was:—Horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 894; unbroken horses, 414; other horses, 153; cows in milk, 1,841; cows in calf but not in milk, 138; heifers in calf, 135; other cattle, two years and above, 595; one year and under two, 1,543; under one year, 1,754; ewes kept for breeding, 5,688; other sheep, one year and above, 2,931; under one year, 4,520; sows kept for breeding, 109; other pigs, 445.

The only mineral raised in 1919 was 140 tons of sandstone. The shire is entirely devoid of manufacture; but the fisheries—white, herring and salmon—are tolerably productive.

Rivers and Railways.—The county is crossed in its southern or hilly part by the river Findhorn, which runs in a direction from south-west to north-east, through Elginshire to the Moray Firth; parallel with this rapid stream, about 8 or 9 miles to the west, courses the river Nairn, which also runs into the Moray Firth. Besides the rivers there are several small brooks and burns, the banks of which are covered with woods and plantations; and there are some elegant seats scattered over the county. The only railway which passes through this county is the Highland railway, on which line Brodie and Nairn are stations. Small as the shire is, it possesses a distinct political and judicial establishment. It comprises four complete parishes, viz.:—Ardclach, Auldearn, Cawdor and Nairn, part of one parish (Croy and Dalcross), and three complete and parts of three ecclesiastical parishes, and contains one royal burgh, Nairn, which is the only town. The county unites with Moray in returning one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1919 numbered 23,976.

ARDCLACH is a highland parish and village in the south-east of the county, bounded on the east by the county of Elgin, and is in general mountainous, covered with heath, and abounding in tracts of bleak and barren moss; the village is 6 miles north-west from Dava station on the Highland railway, and 10 south-east from Nairn, in Nairn poor combination and small debts court district, and is a very healthy and most pleasant resort in the summer: great improvements in agriculture have taken place, the effect of which is to increase every year the arable acreage of this parish. The parish contains the village of Ferness. The river Findhorn traverses the parish, and the scenery along its banks is of the most varied and interesting description. There is a considerable quantity of timber along the banks of the river, which in its course through the parish receives the Tomlachlan, the Leonach and the Rhilean brooks. There are Established and United Free churches. Glenferness House is the seat of the Earl of Leven and Melville. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Capt. Ewen James Brodie J.P. the Earl of Leven and Melville and the trustees of the late Earl Cawdor D.L. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order No. 29, part of this parish has been transferred to Edinkillie parish in Elgin county for civil purposes. The area is 37,953 acres; rateable value, £6,345; population in 1911, 759 in the civil parish and 802 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 43 were in Elginshire.

CAWDOR is a parish and village in the Nairn poor combination and small debts court district. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders Nos. 49 and 133, the part of this parish formerly in Inverness-shire has been transferred to this county, and a part of Moy and Dalarossie parish also added to the parish and a part of Cawdor added to Nairn. The village is 5 miles south-west of Nairn, the nearest railway station, on the Highland railway, and has Established, Free and United Free churches. The Castle, occupied in the shooting season by Earl Cawdor, is an ancient and interesting structure; some of the apartments are hung with tapestry, and there are also vaulted chambers. From the summit of the castle one of the most extensive and lovely views in the county is afforded. This place, since 1796, has afforded the title of baron, and since 1827 that of Earl to the Campbell family, of Stackpole Court, Pemb. In the vicinity is one of the largest and oldest established distilleries in Scotland. Earl Cawdor and Hugh Francis Rose esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area is 34,757 acres; rateable value, £6,708; population, 1911, 847 in the civil parish and 859 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CROY and DALCROSS form a parish partly in this county and partly in the adjoining county of Inverness; particulars will be found under the latter county.

DAVIOT and DUNLICHTY, a joint parish formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), transferred to Inverness-shire.

DYKE and MOY, forming together a parish, part of which was in this county, has been, by the Act previously mentioned, transferred to Morayshire.

GLENFERNESS, see ARDCLACH.

MOY and DELAROSSE form a joint parish partly in Inverness-shire. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part in this county has been annexed to Cawdor parish.

NAIRN is a royal burgh of considerable antiquity, having been regalised by William the Lion. It is the head of a poor combination and small debts court district, and has a station on the Highland railway, and is 185 miles north-north-west by rail from Edinburgh, 93¼ north-west from Aberdeen, 128¾ north by rail from Perth, 9½ south-west from Forres, and 15 north from Inverness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part of the parish of Cawdor in this county has been added to this parish. It is supposed that the town derives its name from the river Nearn (amhuinn na'fhearn), the alder river. The original charter of the burgh is not extant. It was granted by Alexander I. in the year 1100, and was renewed by King James VI. There is a harbour here with breakwater and pier. For a seaport town, Nairn enjoys certain advantages obtained from a fertile country, yielding various articles for exportation. The exports consist of timber, corn, potatoes, eggs, smoked haddocks and herrings. The imports are groceries, hardware, lime, manure and coal. The white fishery is carried on successfully, and salmon fishing is also prosecuted. A sheriff court and a small debt court are held weekly. The present parish church was erected in 1895 at the corner of Seabank road, on a site presented by the late Lieut.-Col. Clarke, of Achareidh, from designs by Mr. John Starforth, architect, of 35 York place, Edinburgh, at a cost of £9,500; it is in the Early Gothic style, and consists of transepts, organ chamber, vestry and session house, with a large square tower and belfry, and contains 1,200 sittings. Adjoining is a hall for Sunday school purposes, holding 400 scholars. There are two New United Free churches, one of which, opened 1st January, 1882, is an edifice in the Early French Gothic style, and has a tower with spire containing a clock and bell; the church is seated for 1,200 persons; there are also Roman Catholic and Free and Congregational churches. The Episcopal church of St. Columba, built in 1857, has 214 sittings. There is an excellent museum, containing a valuable cabinet of minerals. The Public Hall, in the High street, erected at a cost of about £1,800, will hold 600 persons, and is much used for public entertainments. The Court House, near the centre of High street, is a spacious structure, erected about 1818, for the sessions of the town and county courts. The Post Office, in Cawdor street, was erected in 1904. Five branch banking establishments are settled here, and there is also a savings bank. Corn markets are held on Thursday weekly; feeing markets, Thursday preceding 26th May and 22nd November. Some years ago baths were erected by a public company, at a cost of about £15,000; the flooring is excavated out of the solid rock, and there is a graduated depth of water. The bathing facilities in Nairn are very good. There is now a golf course upwards of 3 miles in length, with 18 holes, another course of 9 holes, and a ladies' course of 9 holes. At the western extremity of the town is a monument to Mr. John Strath, forty years schoolmaster here. A bronze monument on a granite pedestal was erected in 1895, facing High street, at a cost of about £1,000, to John Grigor M.D. who left several legacies for the benefit of the people of the neighbourhood, and in 1897 a drinking fountain was erected near the Strath monument, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. A hospital for 22 patients was built in 1906 on the lands of Millbank, Larkfield, adjoining Nairn, at a cost, including site of 4 acres, of £5,000, defrayed by Alexander Mann esq. of Guayaquil, Ecuador. The Nairn Hospital was built in 1846. The Northern Counties Convalescent Home is at Trades park, about 1½ miles from the town. Earl Cawdor, Lt.-Col. Hugh Rose J.P. Capt. Ian Ashley M. Brodie D.S.O., M.C., J.P. lord lieutenant of the county, D. J. Brodie esq. Sir Frederic George Dunbar bart. Thomas Charles Bruce Mackintosh-Walker esq. D.L. Donald A. Stewart esq. J.P. and J. A. Grant esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 8,146 acres; rateable value, including railways, £35,041; rateable value of Nairn parish landward, £8,683; area of burgh, 449 acres; rateable value, £24,765; the population of the parish in 1911 was 5,906, the (then) parliamentary burgh containing 4,412 of this number, and the royal burgh 4,661. Population of ecclesiastical parish, 5,886.

PETTY, a large parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," added to the county of Inverness.

URQUHART and LOGIE-WESTER form a parish, formerly part of this county, but transferred to Ross and Cromarty by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889."

THE ORKNEY ISLES

THESE islands, which form a county, were known to the ancients by the name of "Orcades," and are situated in the North Sea, separated from Caithness-shire by the Pentland Firth, and lying between the parallels of 58 deg. 44 min. and 59 deg. 25 min. north latitude, and 2 deg. and 3 deg. 30 min. west longitude; from the mainland they are distant 4 leagues, and from the Shetland Isles about 15. The form of the islands is extremely irregular, and from these circumstances the dimensions of some of them are ascertained with difficulty. They are separated from one another by portions of the sea denominated "sounds," "firths," or "ferries," some of which are only a mile broad, whilst others are more than 5. The whole area covered is of considerable extent, for from south-west to the north-east they extend about 55 miles, and upwards of 30 in another direction. The aggregate area is 240,476 acres. According to a survey taken by Dr. Murdo Mackenzie in 1750, the whole number of the islands under the denomination of the Orkneys amounted to sixty-seven, of which the following twenty-nine only are inhabited: Mainland, Auskerry, Burray, Cava, Copinshay, Eday, Eglishay, Flotta, Gairsay, Græmsay, Hellyar Holm, Holm of Grimbister, Hoy, Hunda, Papa-Stronsay, Papa-Westray, Pentland Skerries, Pharay (Eday), Pharay (Walls and Flotta), Ronaldshay (North), Ronaldshay (South), Rousay, Sanday, Shapinsay, Stronsay, Sule Skerry, Swona, Westray and Wire or Veira; the remaining thirty-eight which, in the primitive language of the country, are termed "holms," are much inferior in size and solely appropriated to pasturage. The population in 1901 was 28,699, and in 1911, 25,897, viz.:—12,251 males and 13,646 females; the inhabited houses in 1901 was 6,056 and in 1911, inhabited, 5,493; uninhabited, 406; and building, 17.

Early History &c.—The earliest inhabitants appear to have been Celtic, who, at an unknown period before the Christian era, established themselves in Scotland. Diodurus Siculus mentions Cape Orkas as one of the extremities of Britain; and the Orcades are first named in the 2nd century by Pomponius Mela, who states their number at 30; Pliny augments them to 40; but Ptolemy makes them only 30. Tacitus asserts that the Orcades were discovered and subdued by Agricola, which seems to be corroborated by discoveries in the Orkneys of Roman coins belonging to the first century. The origin of the name is believed to be Celtic, and is probably derived from Orkin, a large marine animal—a term that has been applied to both whales and seals. Orkney therefore appears to mean "the land of whales," or of "seals." The Orcades seem to have been esteemed of some importance in the time of Constantine, as they are especially mentioned, with Gaul and Britain, as the patrimony of his youngest son. Little is known of the Orcades from that time until the convulsions in Norway, which ended in the elevation of Harold, "the Fair-Haired," to the undivided sovereignty of that country. About the middle of the 9th century Kenneth Macalpin obtained possession of the islands, and they continued with the Scottish throne until the end of the 11th century, when they were assigned by King Donald Bain to the King of Norway, to whom they were subject until the middle of the 13th century, when they were again transferred by Magnus, King of Norway, to Alexander, King of Scotland. But, although the islands were thus ceded, the Norwegians still asserted their right to them until the year 1468, when James III. of Scotland married Margaret, daughter of the King of Denmark, with whom they again passed, in lieu of her dowry, to the Crown of Scotland; and upon the birth of her son, James IV. they were finally ceded, which cession was confirmed when James IV. of Scotland married Ann, daughter of the King of Denmark. From the middle of the 16th to the beginning of the 17th century the islands were possessed successively by Earls Robert and Patrick Stewart—Robert being a natural son of James V. and half-brother to Queen Mary. Subsequent to this period the islands passed into the possession of the English Crown, and were bestowed by Charles I. and afterwards by Charles II. on the Morton family. In 1776 Lord Morton sold them to Sir Lawrence Dundas, and they have since remained in the family of his descendants. Having been so long and so repeatedly in the possession of the Norwegians, many names of persons, as well as of places, are derived from the Scandinavian language. It will be comprehended that the Orcadians bear no resemblance whatever to the Celtic Highlanders in language, dress, appearance, or customs. Orkney has given birth to some individuals who have attained to eminence in science, literature and the arts. Of these we may mention Malcolm Laing (1762-1818), author of a well-known "History of Scotland;" Mrs. Brunton (1778-1818), authoress; Samuel Laing (b. 1810), author of a "Tour in Norway;" his son, Samuel Laing, Finance Minister of India (1860-5) and M.P. Orkney 1873-85; William Balfour Baikie M.D. the African traveller (1820-1864); Dr. Rae, the Arctic traveller; Thomas Stewart Traill (1781-1862), an eminent professor of medical jurisprudence in the University of Edinburgh; and Murdoch M'Kenzie, author of a "Survey of the Orkney and Lewis Islands." The grandfather of Washington Irving, the American writer, was born in the island of Shapinsay, and the eminent engraver of the 18th century, Sir Thomas Strange, was born in Kirkwall 1721, and died 1792.

Soil, Produce, Climate &c.—Compared with the sterile wilds in some of the sister islands of the Shetlands, or even with the lofty hills and bleak marshy plains of the mainland to the south, these islands gain in appearance that to the eye the surface presents a rich and pleasing variety. The hills composing the ridge that skirts the Western Ocean, as well as those that intersect the mainland, and occupy some of the other islands, for the most part are formed into ridges of some extent, with small intervening valleys; and their tops are generally either flat or rounded. Some few of them are almost entirely covered with verdure; at the base of many are cornfields, interspersed with patches of rich grass, affording excellent feeding for cattle; the soil is sandy or clay loam, and peat moss is found over a considerable portion of these islands. Much of the land under tillage is not regularly fenced, nor divided into separate fields. Numbers of cattle and sheep are raised, for the pasture of which this county is peculiarly well suited. According to the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," the chief crops are shown to be oats, 34,603 acres; barley, including bere, 4,154; total of corn crops, 38,763 acres; turnips and swedes, 13,862 acres; potatoes, 2,436; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 151; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 9,464 acres; pasture (not for hay), 29,062; bare fallow, 126. The total area is 240,847 acres of land, of which 62,854 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 14,164 permanent grass and 93,907 arable land. The live stock in 1920 comprised 4,832 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 19; unbroken horses, 1,661; cows in milk, 8,304; in calf but not in milk, 804; heifers in calf, 694; other cattle, two years and above, 4,662; one year and under two, 8,901; under one year, 7,999; ewes kept for breeding, 11,913; other sheep, one year and above, 3,981; under one year, 13,601; sows kept for breeding, 148; other pigs, 1,145.

The only mineral raised in 1919 was 2,007 tons of sandstone.

The herring fishery is considerable; the principal "stations" are Papa-Stronsay, Deersound, Holm, Burray and South Ronaldshay. The markets are Ireland, Scotland and England, a few only being sent abroad from Orkney, except the produce of the early fishery, which is carried on in the neighbourhood of Stromness. The cod and ling fisheries are also prosecuted from almost all the islands, and in the curing of the fish many persons are engaged. Lobster catching is pursued with fair success, as is also oyster dredging. Particulars as to the number of fishing and other vessels belonging to the port of Kirkwall are given with that town.

The manufacture of kelp was at one time the staple trade of Orkney, but in consequence of the reduction of the duty on barilla, this trade suddenly collapsed, but latterly has shown signs of reviving, as it is now used in the making of iodine and other chemical substances. The distillation of whisky has long been established, there being two distilleries, one near Kirkwall and another at Stromness. Throughout the whole of the islands rain falls in considerable quantity, especially on the western coasts; and it is supposed that the annual amount falling in these islands averages 36.95 inches. Snows are neither so frequent nor so heavy, but they come with comparative violence, and generally from the north-west and south-east; but though what falls in the course of the year may not be much short of the quantity in other northern latitudes, it continues only a few days at a time on the surface of the earth. A peculiarity of the climate with respect to the season of snow and hail merits some attention. Some part of the month of June, which in Britain is well known to be of a pleasant and genial warmth, is here not only colder than the preceding months, but also as much so as any month of winter; for two weeks, and even sometimes more, about the middle of June, the wind blows from the north, strong and piercing, accompanied with snow and hail showers.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The Orkneys comprise 21 entire parishes and 27 ecclesiastical parishes; the only two towns are Kirkwall, which is the capital and a royal burgh, and Stromness, a police burgh. The isles of Orkney and Shetland form one sheriffdom or stewartry, under a sheriff depute, whose authority extends over all; but he has a substitute resident in Orkney, and another in Shetland, by whom the duties are principally performed. Combined they form one parliamentary district, under the title of the county of Orkney and Zetland, which returns one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency of the county in 1919 was 23,816.

DEERNESS is a quoad sacra parish in the most easterly portion of Mainland island, and was formed from the parishes of St. Andrews and Deerness; it is about 10 miles east from Kirkwall, and has Established and United Free churches. At Scarvating, in this parish, are the graves of some 200 Covenanters, prisoners from the battle of Bothwell Brigg, 22 June, 1679, who lost their lives off the coast in the same year when on their way to the West Indian plantations; a monument was erected some years ago to mark the place. In the parish is a remarkable underground opening through which the sea water flows for 70 yards to form a large caldron, open to the surface, 80 yards long and 100 feet in depth; it is called a Gloup. It is probably the most remarkable natural curiosity in the group of islands. The islands of Copinshay lie nearly 3 miles to south-east of the parish. They consist of a larger and 3 smaller islands. The larger is about three-quarters of a mile long and half a mile broad. A lighthouse was erected on Copinshay in 1916. On its seaward side there are cliffs the whole length of the island, 220 feet in height. Tens of thousands of sea birds build their nests here. The gullimot is the predominating bird, but puffins, cormorants, tysties, peregrine falcon, kestrels, fulmar petrels and stormy petrels build also. Several thousands of eggs have been gathered on these cliffs in one season. The geological structure of the Orkney group is mainly composed of the Middle Old Red series. The series gradually rises towards the east and thus the Deerness beds are the highest. Fossil fishes and plants in considerable quantities have been found here, and several of the principal geological museums have been supplied with specimens. The population of Deerness parish in 1911 was 642.

HOY and GRÆMSAY are two islands in Stromness small debt court district. The civil parish is formed of Græmsay Island and part of Hoy Island; the remaining part of the latter being included in Walls and Flotta parish. The island of Hoy, separated from the Mainland of Orkney by Hoy Sound and Græmsay Island, and the most interesting of the Orkney group, is about 11 miles long and from 3½ to 5 miles in breadth, and consists chiefly of three hills, the highest, Ward Hill, being 1,562 feet in height. In Hoy, to the north of the island, is an Established church, and in other parts of the island are many objects of interest, chief of which are the Dwarfie Stone, Hoy Head and the Old Man. The latter, on the north-west coast, is a stack or column of red sandstone, 450 feet in height. RACKWICK is a small village in the island, on the west coast. There is communication with Stromness by steamer three times weekly. Thomas Middlemore esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the entire parish is 15,183 acres; rateable value, £840; the population of the entire parish in 1911 was 393, viz.: Græmsay, 154 and part of Hoy, 239; the population of Hoy Island in Walls and Flotta parish in 1911 was 843.

KIRKWALL

KIRKWALL, the capital of the Orkney Islands, is a town of great antiquity, a royal burgh, and the seat of a synod and presbytery. It comprises the united parishes of Kirkwall and St. Ola, and is 553 miles from Edinburgh by land and ferry, but considerably less by water; 58 north from Wick, 54 north-by-east from Thurso, the nearest station by steamer, 41 north from John o' Groats, Caithness-shire, and 14¾ east from Stromness, and is situate nearly in the centre of the island, called by way of pre-eminence, Mainland, or Pomona, and on the south-east of the bay of Kirkwall. The town bears strong characteristics of antiquity; the principal street being exceedingly narrow, and in several places barely wide enough to afford passage for a cart; the houses are generally arranged with their gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular appearance. Many of these houses, both externally and internally, present striking features of old age—the doors and windows are small, the walls of great thickness, and the apartments narrow and gloomy. The modern dwellings are, however, an exception. The harbour of Kirkwall is safe and commodious, having two excellent piers, one, a massive and substantial structure, erected in 1885, at a cost of about £20,000, which enables steamers and other vessels to come to the pier head at all times of the tide; the outer bay affords good anchorage. Two miles to the south, on the other side of the isthmus, is Scapa pier, erected in 1878, at a cost of £12,000, and here the mail steamer to and from Scrabster (Thurso) and Stromness calls daily. Altogether, the situation of the place is well adapted for the resort of shipping

In the general coasting trade 389 vessels of 72,605 tons arrived at the port in 1918 with cargoes and in ballast. The number that departed was 390, of 69,369 tons.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered as belonging to the port under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," December, 1918, was 30 of 1,207 tons. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the same Act, as belonging to the port, Dec. 31st, 1918, was 493 of 1,596 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters "K. L." or "K." A small import trade is done, the total value in 1910 was £14,374. The export trade of British and Irish products amounted to £129,222 in 1910.

Kirkwall was created a royal burgh, in the first instance, by James III. and its charter was renewed by James V.; its government is confided to a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and seven councillors. By the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Kirkwall is included in with Counties of Orkney and Shetland for parliamentary purposes. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October; the sheriff and small debts courts are held every Tuesday, except during the vacations. The Cathedral Church of St. Magnus, a Norwegian jarl or earl, canonised in 1135, was the seat of the see of Orkney, said to have been founded by St. Servanus in the 5th century, although the list of bishops does not begin till the reign of David I. (1124-53). After the revolution of 1688, the see was abolished, but was revived in 1733 under the title of Orkney and Caithness; in 1769 it was united to Moray and Ross, and is now held with Aberdeen. The cathedral, as originally built during the period 1137-60, consisted of apsidal choir with aisles, transepts, nave of seven bays with aisles and a central tower with spire; it was afterwards largely rebuilt and considerably extended, both eastwards and westwards, at different periods, and now consists of a choir of six bays with aisles, triforium and clerestory, transepts with eastern chapels, nave of eight bays, also with triforium and clerestory, and a central tower of two stages with a modern parapet and pinnacles, and a low pyramidal spire, the whole reaching a height of 133 feet; in the tower are four bells, rescued from the fire which partially destroyed the original steeple in 1671. The transepts, three bays of the choir and two of the nave, and the interior of the south doorway belong to the Norman church of 1137-60; during the Transition period (1160-1200) the piers and arches of the crossing were rebuilt and eastern chapels added to the transepts; during the period 1200-50, most of the nave piers and part of the walls of the aisles were rebuilt, and the entire nave and the centre of the choir vaulted in stone; the nave at this time appears to have consisted of six bays only, but after 1250 it was determined to lengthen the church, and the choir and its aisles were thereupon extended three bays, and a new west front erected, at a distance of about 30 feet from the then existing front, and somewhat obliquely to the axis of the nave, but this new front, probably from want of funds, was not united to the earlier structure, and the arcades completed, till the latter half of the 15th century, and the new part was never vaulted till 1850, when some plaster vaulting was put up. There were once many tombs in the church, but only one or two now exist, and include a mural tomb in the south aisle of the nave to Malise, Earl Palatine of Stratherne and Earl of Orkney (d. c. 1330), and various inscribed floor slabs of the 17th and 18th centuries, but both the tombs and woodwork within the building were either destroyed or greatly injured in 1848, when the fabric underwent a considerable renovation; only the choir, shut off from the crossing by a glass screen, is now used; it is filled with pews, and has a gallery over the north aisle; a number of carved fragments, both of wood and stone, and including some figures and shields of arms, are preserved in a vaulted chamber above the south chapel. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 232 feet; width across the nave, 56 feet, or through the transepts, 100 feet; the height is generally 71 feet. A monument to Dr. John Rae, the Arctic explorer, best known as having been in charge of two expeditions (1848-1851 and 1853-1854) in search of Sir John Franklin, and having on his return in 1854 brought back many relics of that ill-fated explorer, was placed in the cathedral in December, 1895, and comprises a figure of Portland stone on a pedestal of granite, with an inscription; opposite to this is a monument to William B. Baikie M.D. the African traveller. To the south of the cathedral are the remains of the ancient palace of the Bishops of Orkney, in which King Haco, of Norway, died after his defeat at Largs (3rd October, 1263), and here James V. slept in 1540; almost adjoining these are the ruins of the Earl's Palace, built by Patrick Stewart, second Earl of Orkney of that name, beheaded at Edinburgh in 1614; the buildings have richly decorated turrets, mullioned windows and cross loops; they are built of grey freestone and as ruins have a fine effect. The ancient church of St. Ola, which is believed to have existed prior to the foundation of that of St. Magnus, and was then the only religious establishment, stood near the shore of the road, or bay, of Kirkwall, and from its situation the town originally obtained the appellation of Kirkjiovauger, or the "Kirk on the bay," subsequently corrupted to Kirkwall. A short distance from the cathedral is a church belonging to the Patersons United Free church, and near it is the King Street United Free church. There are also Congregational and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of St. Olaf, built in 1878, will seat 160 persons. The Municipal buildings were erected at a cost of nearly £6,000, the foundation stone having been laid by the late Earl of Mar and Kellie, on August 20th, 1884; they are three storeys in height, and are built in the Scottish baronial style, the principal entrance being emphasised by a fine semi-classic doorway, surmounted by two statues of the ancient halberdiers of the burgh in full uniform; on the ground floor is the Post Office and the offices of the burgh surveyor and the town clerk; on the first floor, at the back, is the Town Hall, the front being occupied by the council chamber. The Kirkwall Free Library, in Laing street, contains about 4,500 volumes. The County buildings, midway between the ruins of the Earl's and Bishop's palaces, were erected in 1877, at a cost of about £5,000, and are built principally of the freestone of the district; they contain apartments for the sessions of the local courts and the business of county officials, and committee rooms &c. and are connected with the gaol. Here are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank, and the Royal Bank, and several hotels. Two newspapers are published here weekly, viz.: the "Orcadian," on Thursday, and the "Orkney Herald," on Wednesday. The Poor House, built at a cost of about £3,000, is for the poor of the following parishes only:—Kirkwall and St. Ola, Orphir, Shapinsay, Cross Burness and North Ronaldshay, Lady, Stronsay, Westray, Rousay and Egilshay, Eday, Holm, Birsay and Harray and South Ronaldshay and Burray. The Balfour Hospital was founded by John Balfour esq. of Trenabie, for the relief of the sick and as an asylum for a certain number of aged infirm persons, who are attended gratuitously by the faculty of Kirkwall; it contains 14 beds. A Fever Hospital was added in 1890, and contains 10 beds. The Kirkwall fair was at one time famed for the extent of its business and the number of merchants and others attending from various distant places. It is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of August, and sometimes during that week and the one succeeding; but the business is now comparatively trifling. There is also a horse and cattle market held weekly on every Monday. Opposite to the cathedral, on the west side of the street, once stood the ruins of a fortress called the "King's Castle." It was a place of considerable strength in 1581, when, or soon after, it was occupied by the Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. The remains were cleared away during the latter part of 1865, and the street, called Castle street, formed, leading to Harbour street. The area is 11,074 acres; rateable value, burghal and landward, £24,611; area of burgh, 430 acres; population of Kirkwall and St. Ola in 1911, 4,595, viz.: Kirkwall parliamentary, royal and municipal burgh, 3,810; landward, 785. Included in the total population was 27 inmates and 7 officials in Orkney Poor House. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 1,273.

STROMNESS is a burgh of barony and seaport, also a parish, 14¼ miles west from Kirkwall, and situated on Mainland (or Pomona) Island, opposite to and north of Hoy Island, from which it is divided by the Sound of Hoy. The submarine telegraph crosses Hoy Sound and is continued from the south of Hoy to Brough, in Caithness. Stromness harbour is a fine natural basin, extending from south to north more than a mile, and is sheltered from the Atlantic on the west by a high ridge, the southern extremity of which forms the north side of Hoy Sound; while its entrance is protected partly by the island of Græmsay, which lies midway in the sound, and partly by a ness or point of land stretching from the westward. On the east side it is shielded by two small islands or holms, and even beyond these, in a kind of outer harbour or roadstead, there is excellent anchorage for shipping. Lobster and cod fishing are carried on to some extent. There is a patent slip, but the business now consists chiefly in the repairing of vessels. The pier, a substantial erection, was built in 1878, and extended in 1894, and in 1897 was again enlarged at a cost of about £14.000, and large steamers can enter at any state of the tide. Stromness was created an independent burgh of barony by a charter from the Crown, granted in 1817, when the government was vested in two bailies and nine councillors; it is now a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892" and the "Town Councils Act, 1900," the corporation consisting of a provost, two bailies and six councillors. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the third Thursday of March, June and September and on the first Thursday of December. Stromness is a very irregularly built town, the habitations having been erected without any regard to uniformity of arrangement, and generally as near the sea as possible; some are even within flood mark, and protected by bulwarks, quays and jetties, which each individual appears to have constructed as suited his own convenience. The streets are paved and there are gas works in the town. There is an Established church and two United Free churches: the Episcopal Mission church of St. Mary the Virgin will seat 83 persons. There is a public library, supported by assessment. The market days are first Wednesday of each month. An annual fair is held on the first Tuesday in September. Branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, are established here, and there are four hotels. The Orkney Natural History Society's Museum contains Hugh Miller's celebrated Asterolepis, and many other objects of much interest, and has been further enriched by assortments from the collection of the late Dr. Baikie. There is a 9-hole golf course. The area of the parish comprises 7,608 acres; area of burgh, 454 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £6,508, and of the remainder of the parish, £2,535; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,348, including 1,653 in the burgh, of which 59 was shipping.

SULE SKERRY ISLAND (on which is a lighthouse) is in this parish. Population in 1911, 3.

PEEBLES-SHIRE

THIS county, otherwise Tweeddale, in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire, on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfriesshire, and by the county of Lanark for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures fully 30 miles; from east to west its breadth varies from 20 to 10 miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and it comprehends an area of 222,240 acres of land and 690 of water. In 1901 the population was 15,066, and in 1911, 15,258, viz.:—males, 7,066; females, 8,192. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 3,222, and in 1911, inhabited 3,556, uninhabited 323, and building 18. In size Peebles ranks the twenty-fourth, and in population the thirty-first of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—The shire derives its present name from the county town, and Tweeddale from being the district in which the Tweed has its source, and the vale through which it pursues its course to the east. The Gadeni tribe of Britons, who inhabited this secluded territory on the Tweed, have left innumerable traces of their occupation demonstrated in the names of places, Druidic and warlike remains, and sepulchral tumuli. About 80 A.D. the Romans subdued the British aborigines in the district. After the Abdication of the Roman power in 410, the Gadeni associated with the kindred Britons of Strathclyde, and the descendants of those early settlers continued here throughout the Pictish period; about 530 the Picts were defeated by King Arthur at Cademuir, near Peebles. Kenneth III. King of the Scots, obtained possession of the district about 974. From the epoch of the migration of the Strathclyde Britons, in the 9th century, the Scoto-Irish intermingled with the remaining Britons on the upper Tweed. The next and last class of intruders on the district were the Anglo-Saxons, from Lothian, who finally established a settlement in the shire. One of the chiefs of this people, called Eadulph, settled in the vale of Edleston water; in this manner those of Saxon lineage founded the families of rank in Peeblesshire. At different times the county suffered in a small degree from the inroads of marauders from the English side of the border, but these generally passed to the east, up the coast, or through Dumfries and Lanark. At the defeat of Montrose, 13 September, 1645, at Philiphaugh, some of the heads of the best families fell, or were taken prisoners, fighting on the side of royalty, and Montrose retired to Traquair, in this county; but in the insurrection of 1679, in the west of Scotland, ended by the battle of Bothwell Bridge, there were few natives of Tweeddale; the troops in 1715 and 1745 also passed clear of this county. Since these stirring events the county has not been prominent in the scenes of history. When Scotland began to be divided into sheriffdoms, about the 12th century, Tweeddale was put under the jurisdiction of two sheriffs, one of whom was settled at Traquair, the other at Peebles. Peeblesshire, from its connection with the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde, became a part of the diocese of Glasgow, in which it continued till the abolition of episcopacy.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—The county is an uninterrupted series of hill and mountain ranges, so close upon each other that there is scarcely to be found a plain of moderate dimensions in the district, and not one of any kind unless upon the margin of the Tweed, or its tributaries. The elevations for so small a county are very numerous, and some of them of considerable altitude. The following are among the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea:—Hartfield, 2,916 feet; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gume Cleugh, 2,200; Dundroich, Pykestane, and Hell's Cleugh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800; Broughton Heights, 1,483; and Meigle, 1,480. Notwithstanding the attempts made by several individuals to encourage better modes of agriculture, till within the last century the management of arable farms was in a deplorably low condition; but in later years particularly, draining, ploughing and planting have been carried out effectually, and the general features of the county highly improved. The sides and summits of the hills are at the present time here and there clothed with plantations; and the great vale of the Tweed and its minor valleys are well cultivated, inclosed and divided; arable fields have taken the place of unproductive swamps, and are advancing up the sides of the hills. Oats is the chief corn crop; turnips are also raised largely, the soil being admirably adapted for the growing of this root, upon which large numbers of sheep of the Cheviot and black-faced breeds are fed.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," were:—Oats, 7,520 acres; barley, including bere, 625; total corn crops, 8,160 acres; turnips and swedes, 3,408; cabbage, 18; rape, 676; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 38; potatoes, 580; orchards, 420 acres; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 2,821; pasture (not for hay), 10,932. The area of the county (exclusive of water) is 222,240 acres, of which 166,191 are mountain and heath land used for grazing; permanent grass, 23,792; arable land, 26,666.

The live stock in 1920 comprised: 812 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 285; other horses, 172; cows in milk, 1,595; cows in calf, but not in milk, 197; heifers in calf, 381; other cattle—two years and above, 1,480; one year and under two, 1,787; under one year, 1,188; ewes kept for breeding, 88,847; other sheep, one year and above, 18,837; under one year, 82,381; pigs, 363.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS: above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 27; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 47; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 38; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 18; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 15; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 17; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 32; above 160 and not exceeding 300 acres, 86; above 300 acres, 53; total, 333.

Little can be said of the minerals of the county. At the north-east extremity of the shire coal is found; the 1919 production being included with Argyllshire. The other minerals raised in the county in 1919 were: igneous rocks, 3,791 tons; limestone, 75 tons. The shire is almost devoid of manufactures, except at Peebles and Innerleithen, where there are several mills for the production of tweeds and shawls. The district possesses in the purity and fall of its waters a superiority which makes it altogether advantageous for the establishment of paper and spinning mills, as well as general factories.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams. The upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedsmuir, in this county; it is fed by many tributaries, and, after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the North Sea. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manow, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed, and the Leggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are salmon and trout, and a lake called the West Water Loch, is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. The North British railway enters the north of the county at Leadburn, and sending a branch via Broomlee (for West Linton) and Dolphinton, runs due south to Peebles, where turns eastward to Innerleithen and Galashiels, while a branch of the Caledonian railway runs from Peebles westward, through the centre of the county to Biggar.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The shire comprises 14 parishes and 14 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 4 others; it contains one royal burgh, Peebles, and one police burgh, Innerleithen, but possesses no representative burgh; the counties of Midlothian and Peebles, however, return two members to the Imperial Parliament in two divisions, viz., Northern, and Peebles and Southern; the parliamentary constituency in 1919 was 23,808.

EDDLESTON (or EDDLESTONE) is a parish and village in Peebles small debt court district, 4 miles north from Peebles, with a station on the North British railway. The Eddleston water, which takes its rise from various springs on the north and north-east boundaries of the parish, divides the village into two parts, and at Cowie's Lynn forms a cascade thirty-five feet high. The South Esk also has its source in a small lake within two miles of the village. Anciently the kirk and its small hamlet stood among the hills to the east, where some vestiges of them still exist. Viscount Elibank D.L., J.P. James Morton Robertson esq. J.P. and George Wolfe-Murray esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 18,474; rateable value, £11,449; population in 1911, 589.

INNERLEITHEN is a police burgh, in the small debt court district of Peebles, and a parish, near the mouth of the Leithen, within a quarter of a mile of the left bank of the Tweed, and environed on the east and west by high and partly wooded hills; a bridge across the Tweed connects the town with Traquair; here is a station on the North British railway, 32 miles south from Edinburgh, 16 north-west from Selkirk, 12 west from Galashiels and 6 east-south-east from Peebles. The burgh is governed by a provost and 8 councillors, and is lighted with gas. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the portion of Innerleithen formerly in Selkirk county has been transferred to Peeblesshire. The Roman Catholic church was built by benefactions left by Lady Louisa Stuart, of Traquair, the last of the direct line of that family, d. 1875. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland, and a savings bank here. Upon the banks of the Leithen are several large woollen factories, the machinery of which is partly propelled by the stream, and the works employ a considerable number of hands. Tweed and other woollen goods are made here. Some of the prosperity of the village is derived from the number of visitors who resort here in summer for the benefit of the mineral springs, which possess properties similar to the waters of Harrogate and Strathpeffer, and are found beneficial in cases of scrofulous disorders, inflammation of the eye and various diseases originating in impurity of the blood, and also for dyspepsia and stomach disorders. Private furnished lodgings are obtainable, and there are likewise three hotels. A well-house was erected in 1826, which is now the property of the St. Ronan's Wells and Mineral Water Co. and a pump-house was built in 1896. About 1840 an association was instituted styled the "St. Ronan's Border Club," under whose auspices an annual festival was held for the exhibition of border games and gymnastic exercises. Though the club is extinct, the competitions still take place, and usually in August. About 3 miles west, situated on a knoll, are the ruins of Horsbrugh Castle, an ancient border peel tower, said by Armstrong to have been habitable in 1775. Between Innerleithen and Walkerburn are Purves Hill Terraces, which are planted with ash trees, but their contour may be easily made out; they vary from about 50 feet to about 120 feet in breadth, and the second in the ascent is over 900 feet in length; the depth between each terrace is about 14 feet. At one end of these terraces stood Purves Hill Tower, but only a few stones now remain to attest its site. This place is supposed to have furnished the scene of Sir Walter Scott's novel, "St. Ronan's Well." Glenormiston House is the residence of Michael G. Thorburn esq. J.P. Capt. John Miller-Cunningham, M. G. Thorburn esq. and Arthur Maxwell-Stuart esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 23,994 acres; burgh, 357 acres; the population in 1901 was 3,659, and in 1911, 4,148 in the civil parish, 2,788 in the ecclesiastical and 2,547 in the burgh.

KILBUCHO, see BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM AND KILBUCHO.

KIRKURD is a parish on the western confines of the county, and is bounded on the north by the Tarth, a tributary of the Tweed. The Broughton brook, a tributary of the latter, flows through the parish. From the first-named river the land rises in cultivated and enclosed grounds, and then becomes hilly, with eminences covered with plantations; it is about 4 miles south from Dolphinton station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and on the Carstairs and Dolphinton branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 north-west from Peebles. The ancient church of Kirkurd belonged at an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Soltre, and it remained the property of that charitable institution until transferred to the hospital of Trinity Church, Edinburgh. Castlecraig is the property and seat of James Mann esq. J.P. Lord Carmichael G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., K.C.M.G. Mrs. White and James Mann esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 5,704; rateable value, £8,072; population, 1911, 253.

LEADBURN, see NEWLANDS.

WEST LINTON is a parish, in Peebles small debt court district, with two stations, one at Broomlee, half a mile south-east from the village, and another at Macbie Hill, 3 miles east, on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway. The village is irregularly built, and is on the banks of the Lyne water. Besides this stream, the parish is watered by the North Esk, Tarth and West water, or Polin Tarf, and although the greater part of the district is hilly, it is fertile, and famed for its excellent sheep pasturage; it is 16 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 14 north-west from Peebles and about 11 north-north-east from Biggar. Linton, from 1683, conferred the title of baron upon the family of Stuart, Earls of Traquair, but these titles have been dormant since the death of Charles, 8th Earl, in 1861. There is an Established church and three United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Mungo has 103 sittings; the rectory, net value £210, has been held since 1921 by the Rev. Malcolm E. Carrington. A branch of the Bank of Scotland is established in the village. Macbie Hill lies partly in this and partly in Newlands parish, and was inherited by Amelia, third daughter of Sir William Montgomery, up to 1830, when it passed by marriage to the family of the Beresfords. Medwyn is the seat of John Houblon Forbes esq. J.P.; Garvald, of Mrs. Mitchell, and Spitalhaugh, of Sir James Ranken Fergusson bart. (Vice-Lieut.), J.P. J. H. Forbes esq. Sir James R. Fergusson bart. and Mrs. Mitchell are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 23,257 acres; rateable value, £19,118; population, 1911, 1,000.

CARLOPS, in West Linton parish, is a small village, on the northern verge of the county, about 3 miles north-east from West Linton. It originated in the year 1784, and takes its name from some localities in the neighbourhood called "Carlines loups." It stands at an elevation of 1,000 feet above the sea level, and is much frequented in the summer season. The falls of the North Esk at Patie's Mill are specially attractive.

MANOR is a parish, bounded by Peebles on the north and Megget on the south, and its northern extremity abuts on the Tweed. The district is the vale of the Manor water, which rises in its southern hilly quarter, and falls into the Tweed about two miles west of Peebles, and from which the water supply for Peebles is taken. The parish, 3 miles south-west from Peebles station on the Caledonian and North British railway, is in Lanark poor combination and small debt court district. Here are the remains of some British forts and several peel-towers, the most conspicuous of which is the old Castle of Manor. In the vale, near the public road at the farm steading called Woodhouse, stands the cottage once inhabited by David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom it is said Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the "Black Dwarf," in his novel of that name. Sir James Tolmé Naesmyth bart. the Earl of Wemyss, John Inglis esq. J.P. and Mrs. E. S. Cunningham are the principal landowners. Acreage, 16,628; rateable value, £4,632; population, 1911, 261.

MOUNTAIN CROSS, see NEWLANDS.

NEWLANDS is a parish, in Peebles poor combination, lying between West Linton and Eddleston parishes, watered by the Lyne and the Polinturf, and is bounded on the north-east by the North Esk, and on the north-west by the Medwyn, all of which are good trouting streams. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the hills are mostly green, without heath. Trees thrive in most parts of the parish, and the greater part is enclosed by hedgerows and fences. Newlands church is about 4 miles south from Broomlee station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and about 6 north-west from Peebles. There are two stations in the extreme northern part of the parish on the same branch, one at Lamancha, 5 miles north-east from the church, and another at Leadburn, 8 miles north-east. By the confluence of the Lyne water with the Tarth stand the ruins of Drochil Castle, once a large structure, partly erected by James (Douglas), 4th Earl of Morton, and Regent of Scotland, and left unfinished when he was put to death on the scaffold 2 June, 1581. Lamancha was a seat of the Earls of Dundonald up to the beginning of the 19th century, and is the property of James Mackintosh esq. and is now (1921) unoccupied. The Whim, in this parish, a massive, gloomy and unpicturesque edifice resembling a hospital, once the property of the Argyle family, and afterwards of Sir James Montgomery, baron of the Exchequer, is now the seat of J. Maitland Thomson esq. M.A., LL.D. Macbie Hill is the property of trustees of the late David Hunter esq. and the residence of George Readman esq. Acreage of the parish, 12,531; assessable value, £12,914; population in 1911, 590.

ROMANNO, in the parish, was at the end of the 17th century the property and residence of Dr. Alexander Pennycuick, the author of some clever poems and a poetical "Description of Tweeddale," a district of which he was a native. It is now the property and residence of George Campbell esq. W.S.

PEEBLES

PEEBLES is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of its county and parish, and the seat of a presbytery, 22 miles south from Edinburgh, 22 west-by-north from Selkirk, 54 north-north-east from Dumfries and 47 east-by-south from Glasgow, situated in the centre of the parish, on a beautiful and large plain, having the Tweed running along its southern side and the Peebles (or Eddlestone) water along its northern limit, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills; the neighbourhood is adorned by numerous plantations and mansions. Among the latter, Kingsmeadows, Kerfield, Venlaw and Rosetta are the most conspicuous. Peebles has a station on the Galashiels and Dalkeith section of the North British railway, and is also the terminus of a branch line from Symington on the Caledonian railway. For a long period Peebles has consisted of two towns, respectively called New and Old; the former occupies the ridge of a peninsula projecting westward, along the northern side of which flows the Eddleston, over which is a bridge forming a communication with the Old Town. The Eddleston water, by a bend round the head of the peninsula, falls into the Tweed, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, which has been widened and improved. The streets and principal shops in the town are lighted with gas supplied by the corporation. It is not satisfactorily ascertained at what period Peebles was constituted a royal burgh; Alexander III. was a munificent patron, and its original charter is supposed to have been bestowed by that monarch. Succeeding kings recognised its right to the distinction, and James VI. by his charter granted to the burgesses a large amount of landed property and right of common in different parts, nearly the whole of which has been lost. The government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, seven councillors and town clerk. A sheriff court is held every Friday during session, a sheriff criminal court when required and a sheriff small debt court every alternate Friday; general meetings of the County Council take place here in the months of May, October and December, and the meetings of lieutenancy as occasion requires. The Established church, erected on the site of the former edifice, and opened March 24th, 1887, at a cost of about £10,000, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style of the 13th century, from designs by Mr. William Young, architect, of London, and contains upwards of 1,200 sittings. The Leckie Memorial United Free church was erected in 1877 by the surviving sons and daughters of the Rev. Thomas Leckie, the first pastor of the Associate Burgher Congregation, and presented by them to the congregation in memory of their father. St. Andrew's United Free church, for the west congregation, was erected at a cost of £4,000; it will seat 650 persons, and has a hall adjacent, to hold 200. The Baptist chapel is an edifice of red sandstone, and was opened in 1895. The Episcopal church of St. Peter, in Eastgate, built in 1833, has a fine stained window and will seat 220 persons: a new organ was provided in 1909 at a cost of £500. The incumbency, £200 net, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. Edward Hugh Samwell. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1858 by the exertions of the Rev. J. Clapperton, aided by numerous friends. The Town Hall is used for public assemblies and meetings. The Chambers Institution is a fine building in High street, containing a library of 15,000 volumes, a reading room, museum, and a gallery of art. Within the edifice is also a large hall for lectures and exhibitions, and a county museum. In 1907 it was partially reconstructed, and now contains the Chambers Town hall, municipal offices, police court and public reading room. In 1909 the building was enlarged through the munificence of Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. who gave £10,000 for this purpose. This valuable property was presented to the burgh by the late William Chambers LL.D. founder, with his brother Robert, of the publishing firm of W. and R. Chambers, Edinburgh. He was born here in 1800, and in 1832 began publishing "Chambers' Edinburgh Journal," and subsequently numerous works for the popularisation of knowledge; in 1865 he was elected Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and died in 1883. The old Market Cross, which was in existence in 1320, was, by a resolution of the Council in 1807, ordered for sale as being ruinous. The shaft was secured by the late Sir John Hay, and was preserved in his grounds at Kingsmeadows till 1858, when he handed it over to the burgh. In 1859 the late Dr. William Chambers then had it placed in the quadrangle of the Chambers' Institution, and it there remained till Major Thorburn, in 1895, restored it to its original position at the junction of High street, Northgate, and Eastgate. The Social Club, in Eastgate, opened in 1899, is a building in the Elizabethan style, and contains reading, billiards, and games rooms. Near the town are golf links. Here are four woollen mills, which give employment to a large number of hands. There are several good hotels and a hydropathic establishment. The Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Bank have each a branch here. Two newspapers are published here weekly, which have a good circulation. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March (for hiring servants) and the second Tuesday in October. The Royal Company of Archers, or King's Body Guard for Scotland, come to Peebles from Edinburgh occasionally, to shoot for the old-established prize of a silver arrow, given by the burgh to the most successful marksman. The Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected by the local authorities of the county and the burghs of Peebles and Innerleithen, on the Kirklands, and opened at the end of the year 1895, a new wing being added in 1909: the building is of wood and iron and has 24 beds. The ruins of the two ancient churches are still extant, one of which was dedicated to St. Andrew; the other, built by Alexander III. in the middle of the 13th century, was dedicated to the Holy Cross and St. Nicholas; the same monarch likewise erected a house contiguous to the church, which continued a royal residence until the accession of James VI. to the throne of England. Neidpath Castle, a noble ruin, stands in a romantic glen, about a mile distant. This locality is much resorted to in summer for its excellent trout and salmon fishing. Half a mile to the east of the town, on a hill called "Janet's Brae," may be discerned the traces of two ancient British camps. The parish of Peebles has an area of 16,603 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,537; burghal, £39,172; the population in 1920 was 5,554, landward part 588; total, 6,112, including 11 inmates and 4 officials in Peebles Combination Poorhouse.

SKIRLING is a parish and small village, on the road from Biggar to Peebles, about 2½ miles east from Biggar station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway; the parish, which is about 3 miles long by 2½ in width, is bounded on the south by Biggar water, and west by Spittal brook, which separates it from Lanarkshire. The general features of the district are of the same hilly and undulating character noticeable throughout the surrounding country, but in a more advanced state of cultivation. The parish church is in the presbytery of Biggar; there is also a United Free church. The whole of the land in the parish belongs to Lord Carmichael G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., K.C.M.G. STOBO is a generally well cultivated and planted parish in the western part of the county, about 6 miles in length and 4 in breadth, lying for the most part on the left bank of the Tweed, and bounded on the north-east by the Lyne water; it is in Peebles small debt court district, and has a station on the Symington and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway. Here is an Established church. The greater part of the parish is hilly and of a pastoral character; but adjacent to the Tweed and the Lyne the land is well cultivated, and some of it finely planted—the latter character of improvement especially in the grounds surrounding Stobo Castle, a modern and beautiful edifice within view of the Tweed, and now the property and seat of Hylton Philipson esq. D.L., J.P. who, with the trustees of the late Alexander Balfour esq. is a principal landowner. Acreage, 10,309; rateable value, £5,486; population in 1911, 350.

TRAQUAIR is a parish in the small debt court district of Peebles, and is on the south bank of the Tweed, and watered also by the river Quair; it lies opposite to Innerleithen, with which place it is connected by a modern girder bridge over the Tweed, erected at a cost of about £3,500. The Traquair, Fingland and Newhall brooks and the Bold burn, all tributaries of the Tweed, flow through the parish. The parish is generally mountainous, and includes Gumsleugh and Minchmoor, two lofty eminences lying on the old road to Selkirk, and over which Montrose retreated after his defeat at the battle of Philiphaugh, 13 Sept. 1645. The church is 2½ miles south from Innerleithen station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, and 9 south-east from Peebles; there is also a station at Cardrona in this parish, on the same branch, 6 miles north from the church. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 59, a portion of Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire, has been transferred to Traquair. This place, from 1683, conferred the title of earl upon the Stuart family, barons Stuart, Linton and Caberston, but all these became dormant on the death of Charles, 8th Earl, in 1861. Traquair House has a tower at the north-east corner, believed to have been erected before the year 900; large additions were made to this mansion by John, first Earl of Traquair. The chartulary of the family contains many ancient and important family and historical documents, some of which are dated as far back as the 9th century, and bear the signature of Malcolm III. The house is now the seat of Arthur Constable Maxwell-Stewart esq. J.P. the present representative of the family, who acquired property through Lady Louisa Stuart, who died in 1875; it is delightfully situated on the banks of the Tweed where that river and the Quair unite; and about a quarter of a mile to the west of the mansion-house is the "Bush aboon Traquair" (the subject of the celebrated ballad), now indicated only by a few birch trees, the remains of a thicket or arbour. The Glen, the seat of Baron Glenconner, is also in this parish. Cardrona House is the property and residence of Miss Williamson. The area is 18,489 acres; rateable value, £8,242; population in 1911, 559 in the civil parish and 478 in the ecclesiastical parish.

TWEEDSMUIR until about the middle of the 17th century formed part of the parish of Drumelzier, but was then erected into a separate parish. It is in the south-western corner of the county, with Lanarkshire on its western and Dumfriesshire on its southern border. Within the bounds of the parish the river Tweed is augmented by the Fruid, Talla and Cor waters and several brooks. The water scheme (1895) of the Edinburgh and District Water Trust included the formation of a reservoir in the valley of the Talla, with pipes to convey 24,000,000 gallons daily; a bridge of granite and steel has been erected for the railway to the reservoir, but the old bridge is still in use. The church is 8 miles south from Broughton station on the Symington and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway, and about 17 south-west from Peebles. There are several ancient and rude strongholds in the parish, some of them dignified by the names of "Castles," but having few of the features belonging to a fortress. The Earl of Wemyss and March D.L., J.P. the Corporation of Edinburgh and Hylton Philipson esq. of Stobo Castle, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 32,278; rateable value, £26,062; population in 1911, 198.

WALKERBURN is a village, in the civil parish of Innerleithen, and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Innerleithen and Traquair; it is on the north bank of the Tweed. The village is supplied with spring water from the neighbouring hills, and has a station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, about 8 miles south-west from Peebles. In the village is an Established church, a Congregational church and a Public hall seating 400 people. The Ballantyne Memorial Institute was erected and endowed in 1903 by the late John Ballantyne esq. J.P. of Stoneyhill, in memory of his father, and consists of a library and reading rooms. About 1855 this village consisted only of two cots and a farm house, but the late Henry Ballantyne esq. having secured the use of the Tweed as a motive power for the mills, established woollen factories here in conjunction with the late Robert Freer. Population in 1911, 1,402.

PERTHSHIRE

THIS is one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, lying nearly in the centre of the country, and forming the south-eastern district of the Highlands. It is bounded on the east by the county of Forfar; on the south-east by the counties of Kinross and Fife—from the latter county it is separated for a considerable distance by the Firth of Tay; further on the south its boundaries are Stirlingshire and the small county of Clackmannan, which latter it embraces on both sides; on the south-west Dumbarton touches it for a short distance; on the west it is bounded by Argyllshire, and on the north-west and north by Inverness-shire and Aberdeenshire. The contour of the county is very irregular. From the Firth of Forth at Culross, on the extreme south, to the Forest of Athole, at the source of the Tilt, on the north, it measures 68 miles; and from Meigle on the east to Argyllshire on the west, about 77 miles. The area of Perthshire is estimated at 2,493.4 square miles, or 1,595,802 acres of land and 37,036 of water. The population in 1901 was 123,283, and in 1911, 124,342, viz., males, 58,364; females, 65,978; the inhabited houses being, in 1901, 28,106, and in 1911, inhabited, 29,719; uninhabited, 2,942, and building, 116. In size it ranks as the fourth, the three larger being Argyllshire, Inverness-shire and Ross and Cromartyshire, and in population as the ninth of the Scottish counties.

Early History.—The Romans appear to have extended their conquests into this county, though it lay north of their great wall between the Forth and Clyde; they are recorded to have settled a colony on the site where Perth now stands. One of the roads formed by the invaders, passing along the district of Strathearn towards Perth, may still be traced, and also from Perth along Strathmore, to the extremity of the county; the remains of several encampments, likewise, are at this day observable, particularly one at Ardoch, in the parish of Muthill, the largest and most conspicuous in Scotland. From 446, some 30 years after the Romans retired, until 843, when Perthshire fell under the Dalriadan rule, this portion of Britain was ruled by Pictish kings, and it was in consequence of a marriage between a daughter of this race and a king of the Dalriads that these latter gained the country, and they are believed to have transferred to Scone Abbey the "Stone of Destiny," about 850; in the next century the Danes penetrated here and were defeated by Donal IV. and Constantine III. at Forteviot, early in the century, and again in 961 at Luncarty. In the 11th century the Northumbrians who were established in the Lothians penetrated in this county and defeated Macbeth, in 1056, at Dunsinnane; and until the middle of the 17th century the clan feuds kept the country in a restless state. In August, 1650, Cromwell, after his victory at Dunbar, took Perth; and on 26 July, 1689, Viscount Dundee defeated General Mackay (William III.'s general) at Killiecrankie, in the north of the county, and, in August, William's forces gained a victory at Dunkeld. In 1715 Mar gained a doubtful victory at Sheriffmuir, and in 1745 Perth was occupied by Prince Charles Edward. Before the Reformation and during the domination of episcopacy, Perthshire formed the diocese of a bishop whose seat was at Dunkeld, as well as another bishopric at Dunblane.

Soil, Surface, Climate and Produce &c.—Perthshire is subdivided into districts, which, previous to the jurisdiction established in 1748, were stewartries under the power of different great landed proprietors; the names of these various districts (or feudalities) are Menteith, Gowrie, Perth Proper, Strathearn, Stormont, Breadalbane, Rannoch, Balquhidder and Athole. Little attention, however, is now paid to these divisions, and the county is arranged in the more natural divisions of Highland and Lowland, the uplands around the range of Grampians forming the line of demarcation. 18 parishes belong to the Highland portion, while that of the Lowland comprises 58, but though the latter comprises more parishes, the former covers the larger area, Blair Atholl parish having 181,114 acres and Fortingall 196,683. The soil of Perthshire comprehends all the varieties known in Scotland—the carse and loamy being prevalent on the banks of the rivers, and the sandy and tillable classes on the sides of the hills; in many places are extensive mosses, particularly in Menteith district, but with the progress of agriculture some of these have been partially reclaimed. Five-eighths of the area of the county consists of heath land and woods. The climate on the whole is mild and salubrious, especially in the south, but in the north and west the cold is more general, in consequence of the elevated nature of the country; these districts are, nevertheless, dry and healthy, being screened by the Grampians from the northern blasts. The mountains of greatest altitude in Perthshire are: Ben Lawers, 4,015; Ben More, 3,903; Ben a' Ghlo, 3,724; Schiehallion, 3,561; Ben Doarg, 3,550; Ben Vorlich, 3,224; Ben Ledi, 2,875; Ben Venue, 2,380; Ben Chonzi, 2,922; Farragon, 2,584, and Ben Tulachan, 3,099 feet above the level of the sea. Perthshire is famous for its extensive deer forests, and abounds with game of nearly every description, though the large species is now considerably diminished in numbers; the red deer inhabit the forest and mountain glades and are very wild; but the roe appears, even in the summer, in the woodlands and plantations of the valleys, down to the habitable places; Athole, the largest forest in area in Perthshire, being 50,000 acres; Tealan, 14,000; Glenartney, 15,000, and Rannoch, 10,000. The shootings form a considerable item in the revenue of the proprietors, being let for the season at large rentals to gentlemen, principally for pastime and sport; and in addition they afford employment to a number of persons in various capacities; other game besides deer comprise grouse, pheasants, woodcock, ptarmigan, capercailzie, hares &c. The lochs and rivers also provide good fishing for salmon, trout and pike. Within the last century there has been a great deal of planting in Perthshire. The late Duke of Atholl took a distinguished part in the rearing of plantations; it appears from returns published in 1830 that he planted 15,473 English acres, the plants amounting to the enormous number of 27,231,600; of these plantations, the principal portion, to the amount of about 8,600 acres, are of larch, about 1,000 of oak, the remainder being Scotch fir, spruce fir, a few acres of birch &c. The same nobleman exerted himself for the improvement of the roads of the county, which have been brought into excellent condition. During the present century a great change has been effected in the agriculture of Perthshire, the low parts of which now vie in cultivation, wealth and beauty with any district in Scotland; the upper portion of the county is still devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, which are mostly driven southwards for sale and consumption. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes and turnips are all cultivated. The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Oats, 77,996 acres; barley, including bere, 6,480; wheat, 7,782; rye, 914; beans (to be harvested as corn), 1,097; total corn crops, 94,571 acres; turnips and swedes, 26,050 acres; potatoes, 21,445; mangolds, 39; cabbage, 102; rape, 1,277; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 565; hay from rye-grass, rotation grasses and clover, 34,606 acres; pasture, 55,459 (not for hay); bare fallow, 932 acres; small fruit—strawberries, 138 acres; raspberries, 2,051 acres; currants and gooseberries, 91 acres; others, including mixed areas, 61; orchards, 447 acres, of which 253 were apples. The minerals are not of sufficient importance to be worked as a commercial venture. The only minerals raised in the county in 1919 were, gravel and sand, 1,105 tons; igneous rocks, 57,555 tons; limestone, 60 tons; sandstone, 1,765 tons, and slate, 290 tons. In 1919, 33,574 tons of coal were used in the manufacture of coke, producing 10,973 tons from gas works only. Marble of a superior quality is worked near Glentilt. About Callander the species of rock called "breccia," or more familiarly "plum pudding stone," is not uncommon; and here also, as in other parts, are various kinds of slate. A chain of sandstone runs from Gartree to the vicinity of Crieff; upon the Tay is one of the most celebrated stone quarries in this country; the principal stone of which the Grampians consist is granite. The principal industry in the towns and villages of Perthshire is the weaving of linen goods; in connection with this branch of manufacture, flax spinning mills and a considerable number of bleach fields have been established. The manufactures of the county are not, however, wholly confined to that of linen—tweeds, winceys, blankets and other woollen goods being produced. Cotton spinning works are in operation at Stanley and Doune; and considerable dye works, distilleries, breweries and tanneries, together with iron foundries, engineering works &c. are found in several towns and villages.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—Perthshire abounds with extensive lakes and rivers. The chief rivers are the Tay, the Earn, the Garry, the Bran, the Almond, the Teath, the Allan, the Dochart, the Tummel, the Bruar, the Ericht, the Ardle, the Shee and the Isla—besides innumerable third and fourth-rate rivers and streamlets of all sizes. The Forth, from rising in Stirlingshire, is not considered a Perthshire river, though it flows along a large portion of its south-west quarter. The chief lakes of the county are Loch Katrine, Loch Achray, Loch Ard, Loch Voil, Loch Lubnaig, Loch Dochart and Loch Earn. Those are in the south-west part of the shire; Loch Tay, in the centre of the mountainous district, and Loch Rannoch, Loch Ericht and Loch Lydoch, the two latter in part only, in the north-west quarter. In the lower division there are some smaller and less important lakes. The most remarkable mineral waters in this county are those of Pitcaithly, near the Bridge of Earn, which have long been famed for their efficacy in curing scrofula and complaints of the stomach. The railway system comprises lines belonging to the Caledonian, the North British and the Highland railways, which all centre in the city of Perth. The Caledonian enters the county from Aberdeen at Alyth Junction (from which place is a short line to Alyth), passing through Coupar Angus (with a branch to Blairgowrie) and Cargill to Perth, and thence, by a line through the Carse of Gowrie, to Dundee; one, via Auchterarder and Dunblane, to Stirling (a branch from Dunblane running to Callander and Loch Tay and on to Oban), and one from Crieff Junction to Crieff, where it joins a line from Crieff to Comrie, from which place is a line to Lochearnhead on the Dunblane and Oban branch; another from Crieff to Methven Junction (with a short line to Methven) and Almond Bank. The North British enters the county at Newburgh, from Ladybank Junction, and at Glenfarg, from Mawcarse Junction, both lines running to Bridge of Earn and thence to Perth. The Highland railway runs from Perth, via Luncarty, Dunkeld, Ballinluig (whence there is a branch to Aberfeldy), Pitlochry, Blair Atholl and through Glengarry to Kingussie, thence to Inverness.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Perthshire comprehends 71 entire civil parishes and 92 entire and parts of 9 ecclesiastical parishes. The county is divided into 10 districts—Athole, Balquhidder, Breadalbane, Glenshee, Gowrie, Menteith, Rannoch, Strathardie, Strathearn and Stormont—each under the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace court and deputy lieutenants; it is further divided into two sheriff substitute districts, called Eastern and Western, and controlled from Perth and Dunblane. The shire contains one royal burgh, the city of Perth, and eleven police burghs, Aberfeldy, Abernethy, Alyth, Auchterarder, Blairgowrie, Callander, Coupar Angus, Crieff, Doune, Dunblane and Rattray.

The county for parliamentary purposes is separated into two divisions, and sends one member for each. The parliamentary constituency for 1919 was: Kinross and Western Division, 26,261; Perth Division, 37,229.

ABERFELDY is a town and police burgh in the parish of Dull, and in the poor combination of Atholl and Breadalbane, with a terminal station on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, and is 18 miles north-west from Dunkeld, 9 west from Logierait and 6 north-east from Kenmore; the town stands on the south bank of the beautiful river Tay, on the Great Highland road, which crosses the river by an elegant bridge of three arches, constructed by the celebrated Maj.-Gen. George Wade, sometime M.P. for Hindon and Bath, and who, during the years 1725-6, superintended the formation of a number of military roads in the Scottish Highlands. The town, which is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water, was constituted a police burgh in 1887 under the Lindsay Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, who is ex-officio a justice of the peace for the county, two bailies, and six councillors. Here are Established, Free, United Free, Congregational and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Margaret, and the Rev. John Harrison has been priest in charge since 1906. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a woollen factory, owned by Messrs. P. and J. Haggart. The principal hotels are the Breadalbane Arms and the Palace and Station hotels, all of which are much patronised in the season by visitors. The celebrated 42nd Highlanders, commonly known, on account of their dark tartan, as "the Black Watch," were enrolled in this district, but consisted in the first instance of armed detachments of loyal clans employed during the period 1725-39 to watch the Highlands. In 1887 a monument was erected here, in the form of a cairn, at a cost of about £500, to commemorate the formation of the regiment; this monument was struck down by lightning, but has been re-erected. In the neighbourhood are the romantic falls of Moness. Several fairs were formerly held in the course of the year; but the only one now is on the last Thursday in October for cattle and sheep; weekly cattle sales are held on Thursday. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the burgh is 224 acres; rateable value is £9,746; population in 1911 was 1,592 in the burgh and 1,752 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ABERFOYLE is a parish and village, in the small debts court district of Dunblane; the parish is bounded on the north by Loch Katrine, and on the south by the Duchray water, and is remarkable for its picturesque scenery, its fine lakes and numerous streams, and the marked direction taken by the Grampians through the lower part of it, as well as for producing a great quantity of rare plants, of much interest to the botanist. The village, or "clachan," of Aberfoyle has a station on a branch from Stirling, via Buchlyvie, of the North British railway, and is about 18 miles north-west from Stirling and 27½ from Glasgow. There is an Established church and a reading room. The Episcopal mission church of St. Mary will seat 200 persons; the Very Rev. George Ernest Grub F.S.A. has been incumbent since 1917. This place is the scene of some incidents in Sir Walter Scott's novel 'Rob Roy," and at the head of the valley or pass lies Loch Ard, a bright and placid lake, surrounded by woods, above which rises the lofty Ben Lomond, one of whose summits is 3,192 feet above the level of the sea. A wooded promontory here jutting out into the water is said to have been the spot on which the skirmish described in "Rob Roy" occurred, and where Helen Macgregor made her first appearance. Loch Ard and Loch Chon, near Aberfoyle, are considered the earliest fly-fishing lochs in Scotland, fish taking readily early in March. In this parish is Ben Venue mountain, 2,393 feet high. The well-known Bailie Nicol Jarvie hotel here, mentioned in "Rob Roy," provides excellent accommodation to tourists and visitors, and affords a good supply of boats. An old tree outside the hotel has hanging from its branches, by a chain, the coulter of a plough, used by Bailie Nicol Jarvie. About a mile north of Loch Chon is the source of the river Forth. There is a good nine-hole golf course, a mile from the hotel. Fairs are held within the parish on the 3rd Tuesday in April, the first Friday in August, and the third Thursday in October. The Duke of Montrose K.T., A.D.C. is the principal landowner. The civil parish of Aberfoyle contains an area of 26,810 acres; rateable value, £32,831; population in 1911, civil 1,147, and in the ecclesiastical, 1,102.

ABERNETHY is a parish and village and police burgh, formerly in the counties of Fife and Perth, but now included entirely in the latter, by order of the County Council commissioners. The parish is bounded by the river Earn on the north, on the east by Newburgh and Abdie, on the south by Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo, and on the west by Dron and Arngask, and is between 5 and 6 miles both in breadth and length. The village, said to have been the capital of the Pictish kingdom of Scotland, is scattered, and is about two-thirds of a mile south-east of the river Earn, 8 miles south-east from Perth, and 14 west from Cupar, in Fife, with a station on the Ladybank Perth branch of the North British railway. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Here are Established and United Free churches. In an angle of the burial ground of the Established church stands a circular tower, about 75 feet high and 24 feet in diameter at its base. The date of its erection is unknown, but tradition ascribes its origin to the Picts. On the outside of the tower is yet to be seen the jougs (a padlocked collar and chain), used for the detention of offenders in bygone days. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in salmon fishing and weaving. Aberargie is a small village about a mile and a half to the west. Glenfoot is a hamlet. A hill, a little to the north of Binn farm, commands one of the finest views in Scotland, comprising Strathmore, Strathearn, the Grampians, Ochils, Sidlaws, the Pentland hills, the Firth of Forth, Lochleven Castle, Glen Farg &c. Mrs. Amy Balfour Hay-Neave, R. W. Seton-Watson esq. and the Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield D.L. are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 9,232 acres; burgh, 45 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,740; burgh, £2,130; population in 1911, 1,267 (including 7 on Mugdrum Island), and burgh, 593, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 623, of which 30 were in Fifeshire.

ALYTH is a town and police burgh and parish in the poor law combination of Perth and in the small debt court division of Blairgowrie. The parish formerly extended into Forfarshire, and included a portion of Mount Blair, a conspicuous hill 2,260 feet above the level of the sea, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 40 to 50), boundary order 92, the Forfarshire portion has been transferred to this county. The parish is divided into two considerable districts by the hills of Alyth, Loyal and Barry. The southern district lying in the strath is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and, as well as the tract of land towards the hills, is fertile and verdant, and watered by the river Isla and several small streams. The town, pleasantly situated at the base of a range of hills on the small river Alyth, is 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 20 north-north-east from Perth, 17 north-west from Dundee, 12 west from Forfar, 5 north-east from Blairgowrie, and 4 north-west from Meigle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, completed in 1861. The town is lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with good water, and being within an easy distance of Dundee, receives a number of visitors from that neighbourhood during the summer months. A new and substantial stone bridge was erected in 1883 over the Alyth stream, at a cost of nearly £900. Alyth was created a burgh of barony by James III. but in 1862 the Lindsay Police Act was adopted and the town is now governed (according to the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Acts, 1892 and 1903") by a Town Council, consisting of a provost, two bailies and six councillors. A police court is held when necessary. The parish church is an imposing edifice of stone in the Norman style, with tower and lofty spire. There are two United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church of St. Ninian, built in 1856, will seat 150 persons: the rectory, net value £400, has been held since 1911 by the Rev. H. B. Nichol, of Aberdeen University; attached is the church of St. Margaret at Meigle. There are two mills employed in the manufacture of linen, and another for making woollens &c. and the combined factories afford work for a large number of the inhabitants. Fairs are held for hiring, cattle and sheep, the third Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in November. Two newspapers are published here, "The Alyth Guardian," on Fridays, and "The Alyth Gazette," on Tuesdays. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The Public Library was erected from a bequest of £300 left by the late Hon. William Ogilvy, of Loyal, who also bequeathed the interest of a further sum of £200 for its support, and it now contains several thousand volumes. There are also several other benefactions, including the Balendoch fund, a sum of £30 per annum, bequeathed by the late Gilbert Hay esq. now merged, along with the Duncan, Fleming and Robertson Mortifications, into a new scheme under the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Commission; the Fenton Mort fication, being £800 left by Mr. John Fenton, for providing coals and clothing for the poor, and the Ramsay bequest, being the interest of £418 left by the late Dowager Lady Ramsay, of Bamff, to be distributed annually among the poor of the district. The late James Duncan esq. bequeathed a sum of £3,000, the income of which is to be applied to the assistance of deserving poor, being residents of the parish and burgh of Alyth, and not in receipt of parish relief. Bamff House is the residence of Sir James Henry Ramsay bart. M.A., D.L., J.P. The Earl of Airlie M.C. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish is 23,296 acres; rateable value, landward, £18,285; area of burgh, 246 acres; rateable value, £7,849; population in 1911, 2,937, of which the burgh contained 1,860; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,786.

ARNGASK is a parish containing the village of GLENFARG, formerly considered as in the counties of Kinross, Fife and Perth, but now, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), wholly in Perthshire. The parish is about 4 miles in diameter, and included in the small debt court district of Perth, the church being half a mile east from Glenfarg station on the Mawcarse Junction and Perth branch of the North British railway, and about 6½ miles north from Kinross. The Farg, together with other streams in the vicinity, afford good sport to the angler, and present some beautiful scenery. The parish contains an Established church, in the churchyard of which is the grave of Major-Gen. John Agmondesham Vesey Kirkland D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. of Fordel, interred here 27 March, 1896; he raised the 2nd Battalion of the 5th Foot in 1857, and commanded it for 12 years; here also is buried Gen. Robert Bruce, of Glendouglie, late Commander of Her Majesty's forces in Scotland, who died Oct. 14th, 1891. There is also a United Free church and a Public Hall. Adjoining the village of Glenfarg is a 9-hole golf course, 600 feet above the sea level. Duncrievie and Drunzie are hamlets, about a mile from Glenfarg railway station. Acreage, 6,446; rateable value, £7,964; population in 1911, 652.

AUCHTERARDER is a town and police burgh, the head of a presbytery, and a parish, in the small debts court district of Perth, and poor law combination of Upper Strathearn. The town stands on the high road between Perth and Stirling, and on the south of the river Earn, 14 miles south-west from Perth and 20 north-north-east from Stirling, and has a station, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway. It was once a royal burgh, but under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," it is now governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 councillors. Under a special Act of Parliament the town owns about 200 acres of arable land, now vested in the Town Council. The town is lighted with gas by a private company, and an ample supply of excellent water is obtained from the Duchally and Crook of the Moss springs. There is an Established church, two United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Kessog will seat 200 persons; the Rev. John Greeson has been priest in charge since 1904. Aytoun Hall, which stands in the centre of the town, was erected in 1872 by the inhabitants as a memorial to the late Captain Aytoun, of Glendevon, who in 1832 provided the town with its first water supply. The principal manufactures are fancy shirtings and woollen goods. The corn market is held on Saturday, and live stock sales every alternate Saturday. Auchterarder House is the residence of Andrew T. Reid esq. and Cloan, of Viscount Haldane K.T., P.C., O.M., M.A., LL.D. Andrew T. Reid esq. the Earl of Camperdown; Lord Rollo C.B., D.L. Viscount Haldane and Sir William Stowell Haldane J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 11,166 acres; rateable value, £23,726; population in 1911, 3,175, including 57 inmates and 9 officials in Upper Strathearn Combination Poorhouse; the burgh population in 1911 was 2,294.

BALQUHIDDER is a Highland parish, in the western extremity of the county, among the Grampians, and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The village, situated at the east end of Loch Voil, is 3 miles from Balquhidder station, and 12 north-west from Callander, and is remarkable as the last residence of the famous Rob Roy (Robert Macgregor Campbell), a highland chieftain, born in 1660, who became a freebooter in 1716, and died in 1735; his grave is pointed out in the churchyard, and was visited by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and Princesses Louise and Beatrice in 1869. The parish is mountainous and pastoral, and the numerous acclivities it contains have originated the popular reference to the "Braes of Balquhidder"; among its mountainous peaks Ben Chabhair and Stobinian rise in conspicuous superiority, and the lakes include Loch Doine, Loch Voil (4 miles long), part of Loch Lubnaig, and part of Loch Earn, with others of minor celebrity. The rivers Lochlarig and Balvaig flow through the centre of the parish. Here is an Established church. Between Kingshouse and Balquhidder is the family vault of the MacGregors, of Edinchip. James Carnegie esq. D.L., J.P. Mrs. B. B. Hamilton, Capt. Sir Malcolm MacGregor bart. C.B., C.M.G., R.N., D.L., J.P. John McNaughton esq. and the trustees of the late John Stewart M'Donald esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 54,675 acres; rateable value, £8,800; population, civil, in 1911, 664; ecclesiastical, which includes part of Comrie, 734.

LOCHEARNHEAD is a beautiful little village, standing at the head of Loch Earn, from which it derives its name, and has a station on the Crieff and Comrie section of the Caledonian railway. Here is a United Free church, serving also for Balquhidder. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Angus, situated here, is served from Callander. The village was twice visited by H.M. the late Queen Victoria, the first time with the Prince Consort in 1842, and again in September, 1869, in company with the Princesses Louise and Beatrice, who stayed at the hotel while on a visit to the late Rear-Admiral Sir Malcolm Macgregor and Lady Helen Macgregor, whose seat, Edinchip, is within half a mile of the village. The loch, which lies at the foot of Glen Ogle, a wild pass, or outlet, from the Breadalbane country and the north-western Highlands, is 7 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and said to be 100 fathoms deep. The beautiful situation and quiet character of the place, with the many objects of interest, and the fine scenery, attract many visitors, tourists and private families during the summer months. The views include the fine scenery about the lake, the upper part of Strathearn, and the mountains, one of which (Benvoirlich) rises from the shore to a height of 3,300 feet. There is a golf course of 9 holes in connection with the hotel, and excellent fishing, free to parties staying at the hotel, may be had in the loch. An omnibus meets the principal trains. Population returned with the parish.

STRATHYRE is a small village in the parish of Balquhidder, 8 miles north-west from Callander, and has a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway. Here is a Mission church, a good hotel, an inn and a temperance hotel. Population returned with the parish. The Strathyre and Balquhidder districts of the parish, as well as Lochearnhead, are favourite summer resorts for visitors. The village is well sheltered from the east wind, and excellent fishing can be had in Loch Lubnaig, free to those staying at the hotels. In the village is a monument, erected by the inhabitants in 1883, to Dougal or Dugald Buchanan, a celebrated Gaelic poet, who was born here in 1716, and died at Kinloch Rannoch, 2 July, 1768.

BLAIR ATHOLL,

WITH BRIDGE OF TILT, CALVINE AND STRUAN.

BLAIR ATHOLL is a parish and small village in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district: what is now designated the parish of Blair Atholl formerly consisted of four parishes, viz.: Blair, Lude, Kilmaveonaig and Strowan. The district of Atholl is 45 miles in length and 30 in breadth, and the parish is 24 miles from north-east to south-west, and 20 from north to south. It lies on the north-west Highlands of Perthshire, bounded on the south by Fortingal, Dull and Moulin, and on the north by Inverness and Aberdeenshire, and on the east by Kirkmichael and Moulin, and on the west by Rannoch, and contains a large tract of Highland territory, several of the mountains of which are covered with large and beautiful woods, interspersed with fertile vales. The valley of the Garry, from the pass of Killiecrankie to the point of Strowan, may be considered the nucleus of the parish. The principal lochs and rivers are Loch Garry and Loch Tummel, and the Tummel, Tilt, and Garry, all abounding with a variety of fish. The woods in the neighbourhood are very fine, some of the larches being the oldest in Scotland. The scenery around includes Glen Tilt, the principal pass from the centre to the north-east of Scotland, the Falls of Tarff and the Falls of Fender. Three miles to the west of the village are the Falls of Bruar, consisting of a succession of cascades in a ravine of romantic beauty. The banks are covered with woods, planted by former Dukes of Atholl. The mountains in the parish are Ben Dearg, 3,304 feet; the Ben-a-Ghlo range, the highest peak being Carn-nau-Gabhar, 3,671, and Ben Udlaman, 3,306 feet in height. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Dull and Moulin have been added to this parish. The village of Blair Atholl stands on the north side of the river Garry, and on the road from Dunkeld to Inverness, 20 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 7 north-west from Pitlochry, and has a station on the Perth and Aviemore section of the Highland railway; it is lighted with electricity, supplied from Blair Castle, since 1911, and there is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and two hotels. The parish church, situated between the villages of Blair and Bridge of Tilt, is a plain structure. The United Free church was erected in 1856. The old Episcopal church of Kilmaveonaig is an ancient edifice, dating from 1275, rebuilt in 1591 and again in 1794: it will seat 100 persons: it is now a mission church. Tullibardine Institute, built in 1907, comprises a public hall, drill hall and reading, billiard and refreshment rooms. Blair Castle, the family seat of the Duke of Atholl K.T., C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O. is within a short distance of the village, and has been restored from designs by Mr. Bryce, architect, of Edinburgh. The Duke of Atholl K.T., C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O. Miss D. M'Inroy and G. F. Barbour esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 187,926 acres; rateable value, £18,347; population in 1911, 1,580; ecclesiastical, 1,342.

BRIDGE OF TILT is a small village in this parish, separated only from Blair Atholl by the water of Tilt, which is here crossed by a bridge, as the name indicates. Here is a United Free church.

CALVINE is a hamlet in this parish with a district school. The principal heritor of the parish is the Duke of Atholl K.T., C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O. Struan railway station is half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

STRUAN, or Strowan, is a small village in the parish of Blair Atholl, and 5 miles north, with a station on the Highland railway. Here is an Established church, and in the churchyard is a remarkable stone with a Runic inscription; there is also a United Free Mission church. Population returned with the parish.

BLAIR DRUMMOND, see THORN HILL.

BLAIRGOWRIE is a town and a parish in the poor law combination of Perth. The parish, about 11 miles in length and 3 miles wide, is beautifully situated, on the southern slope of the range of hills which bound the valley of Strathmore on the north, and at the mouth of the pass through which runs the great north road to Fort George, and is divided by the Grampian Hills, which rise immediately north of the town. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary order 72, parts of the parishes of Bendochy and Kinloch have been added to Blairgowrie, and part of Blairgowrie annexed to Bendochy. The town is 12 miles east from Dunkeld, 5½ south-west from Alyth, and 4¾ north from Coupar Angus, with a terminal station on a branch from Coupar Angus, of the Caledonian railway, opened in 1855. The river Ericht passes close to the town, forming the eastern boundary of the parish, and propels the machinery of several flax spinning mills: there are also engineering works, and of recent years it has devoloped a very large fruit growing industry, principally raspberries. On account of its attractive surroundings, the salubrity of the air, and the numerous lovely walks in the environs, the town is much frequented in summer by families from a distance. Blairgowrie was created a burgh of barony in 1634, by a charter from Charles I. The government erected under the burgh charters has now been superseded under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and subsequent Acts, by a Town Council, consisting of a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A sheriff small debt court is held for the disposal of cases not exceeding £20 on the second Saturday in January and the first Saturday in April, July and October. A police court sits when necessary. There are two Established and two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Congregational chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Catharine, built in 1842, will seat 150 persons; the Rev. Frederick William Davis, of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, has been rector since 1870. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, as well as a savings bank. One newspaper, viz.: the "Blairgowrie Advertiser," is published here on Saturday. Fairs and markets are held here as follows: Whitsunday Feeing Market, fourth Tuesday in May; Martinmas Feeing Market, last Tuesday in November; After Martinmas Feeing Market, early in December; Fair o' Blair, Tuesday following fourth Monday of July; cattle markets, alternate Tuesdays. In the vicinity are the remains of the castle of Glasclune, a strikingly picturesque ruin, situated on the precipitous bank of a narrow wooded glen, about 2 miles from the town. Excellent trout and salmon fishing is obtainable in the Ericht, the Tay, the Isla and the burns of the Lunan and Lornty (all within a moderate distance of the town), and capital perch and pike fishing may be had in the several lochs in the neighbourhood. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., P.C., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G. is the principal landowner, and William C. McPherson esq. is the lord of the manor and also a landowner. The civil parish has an area of 15,870 acres; burgh, 189 acres; rateable value, landward, £14,347; burghal, £19,883; the population, 1911, parish, 4,319; burgh, 3,249; ecclesiastical parishes, Parish Church, 1,963; St. Mary's, 2,199. Population of the wards, North, 1,424; South, 1,825.

ROSEMOUNT is a village in this parish, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 2 miles south of Blairgowrie and 2½ north-west of Coupar Angus.

CARSIE is a hamlet in this parish, 2 miles from Blairgowrie, which is the nearest railway station.

Sub-Post, T., M. O. & T. E. D. Office, High street; David H. Braid, sub-postmaster. Letters should be addressed Blairgowrie, Perthshire. Open sundays for telegraph business 9 to 10 a.m

BRACO (otherwise ARDOCH) is a village in Upper Strathearn poor law combination and in the small debt court division of Dunblane; the village is on the Knaik water and the road from Dunblane to Crieff, 1 mile north from Greenloaning station on the Dunblane and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south from Crieff. Here are Established and United Free churches. In the parish are the remains of a Roman camp, forming an oblong of 140 yards by 125 within the lines; the Prætorium, or "general's quarters," which is a regular square of twenty yards on each side, rises above the level of the camp, and contains the foundation of a house ten yards by seven. Adjoining are two other encampments communicating with each other; various interesting relics recovered from these fortifications, including helmets, fragments of bridles, and other articles, preserved for a considerable time at the house of Ardoch, were carried off by soldiers in the Duke of Argyll's army after the battle of Sheriffmuir in 1715. This place, since 1735, has afforded the title of baron to the Duff family, now represented by the Duchess of Fife (Princess Arthur of Connaught). Braco Castle is the residence of James Findlay Muir. Ardoch is the residence of Col. Sir Theodore Francis Brinckman bart. C.B. and Orchill the property and residence of the Rev. Thomas Crawford B.D., J.P. Capt. W. A. Drummond-Moray is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. Ardoch parish, in which Braco village is situated, was erected in 1885 from the parishes of Blackford, Dunblane and Muthill. The area of the parish comprises 20,715 acres; rateable value, £14,832; the population in 1911 was 863 civil, and 898 ecclesiastical.

CALLANDER is a modern police burgh and a parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The parish extends from the banks of the Teith to the Grampians, and is about 18 miles in length by a breadth of from 4 to 8 miles. The village is situated in a beautiful valley on both sides of the Teith, here crossed by a bridge of three arches, and is 52 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 south-west from Perth, 45 north from Glasgow, 16 north-west from Stirling and 8 north-west from Doune, with a station on the Dunblane, Doune, Callander and Killin Junction branch of the Caledonian railway, and is completely sheltered on the north by a line of precipitous crags, 700 or 800 feet high, partly covered with wood. The streets are disposed on a regular plan and contain a number of buildings of some architectural merit. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and has a good supply of water brought from Loch Lubnaig, which is in the parish, and 3 miles north-west, and conveyed to the town by gravitation. By the adoption of the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1862," the place was constituted a police burgh, and is now governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors; an approved system of drainage has been carried out, the sewerage being conveyed to a meadow a mile distant and there utilised. The scenery around Callander is uncommonly beautiful; immediately above the village is a lovely spot formed by the junction of two little rivers, issuing respectively from Loch Lubnaig and Loch Vennacher, and unitedly forming the Teith. Two miles west of Callander is the pass of Leny, which affords access to a delightful range of mountain prospect; the bridge of Bracklinn is another fine point in the scenery and the ride to Loch Katrine and the Trossachs, about 9 miles from the village, is extremely fine. Callander is generally a most convenient centre for a number of excursions through scenery of every variety, but owes its prosperity chiefly to the fame of the romantic scenery of the Trossachs. 9 miles distant, and reached during the season by coaches from the railway station; a great number of visitors and tourists come here during the summer. Loch Katrine is 9 miles long and nearly 1 broad, and at the east of it is Ellens Isle; Loch Vennacher, 4 miles long and 1 broad, is in this parish. From Loch Katrine the city of Glasgow obtains its supply of water, which is conveyed in a tunnel 6,975 feet long, through a range of mountains south of the Loch, to Loch Chon, thence in tunnels and aqueducts 26 miles long to Murdock reservoir, wherein is stored 500,000,000 gallons of water; it is then conveyed in double pipes to Glasgow. In the parish are four mountains, viz.: Ben Ledi, 2,875 feet; Stoba Chon, 2,839; Ben Vane, 2,685; and Ben Aan, 1,800 feet in height. There are Established and United Free churches and a Mission hall. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and the Rev. Henry Leonard Skinner has been rector since 1905. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The principal hotels are the Dreadnought, the Ancaster Arms, The Crown, and the Caledonian temperance hotel, and there is a Hydropathic Establishment. The Earl of Ancaster T.D. Viscount Esher G.C.B., G.C.V.O. the Earl of Moray, Capt. E. M. Murray-Buchanan, Mrs. B. Baillie-Hamilton, Donald McLaren esq. and William H. Marshall esq. are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Callander has an area of 51,186 acres; burgh, 273 acres; rateable value, £24,341; the population in 1911 was of burgh, 1,504, civil parish 2,225, ecclesiastical parish 1,977.

The TROSSACHS is the name given to a mountainous district in the western portion of the parish, containing some of the most magnificent lake and mountain scenery in all Scotland. It is a quoad sacra parish formed from the civil parishes of Aberfoyle, Callander and Port of Monteith (or Menteith), and has an Established church. There is an hotel here, on the bank of Lake Achray. The population in 1911 was 290.

The BRIDGE OF TURK, made famous by the couplet (vide Sir Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake," The Chase, Canto I.)—

"And when the Bridge of Turk was won.
The headmost horseman rode alone," is a small hamlet in this parish, and contains the ruins of a very large and handsome hotel, unfortunately burned down some time ago. The nearest railway station is at Callander, 6½ miles east.

Post, T. M. O. & T. E. D. Office, Callander (letters should have Perthshire added); Donald Mackenzie, postmaster. The telegraph office is open between 8 a.m. & 7 p.m.; sundays, 9 to 10 a.m

COLLACE is a parish and village surrounded by the parishes of Cargill, St. Martins, Kinnaird and Abernyte, and is 4 miles south from Woodside and Burrelton station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway and 8 north from Perth, and in the small debt court district of Perth. The parish church is a Gothic structure with a square tower, erected in 1813; there is also a United Free church. Freestone of good quality abounds in the parish. The hill of Dunsinane, 1,114 feet above the sea level, is in this parish. Upon this insulated site (rendered famous by Shakspere ("Macbeth," Act v.), macbeth, the Thane of Glamis, in 1043 erected a strong and lofty castle, for the purpose of keeping the surrounding country in subjection. In 1054 an overwhelming force under Siward, Earl of Northumberland, supported by Edward the Confessor, the reigning King of England, marched upon the stronghold on behalf of Malcolm III. son of King Duncan, whom Macbeth had previously murdered. Macbeth fled northwards, but was pursued and slain, according to tradition, at Lumphanan, in Aberdeenshire, in 1057 or 1057. The fortress was razed to the ground. The trustees of the late John Mackay Bernard esq. and Gerard Monerieff esq. are the chief landowners. The area of the parish is 3,498 acres; rateable value, £3,851; population in 1911, 366 civil and 324 ecclesiastical.

COUPAR-ANGUS

COUPAR-ANGUS is a police burgh and market town and parish, in the poor law combination of Perth and small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is pleasantly situated on the Isla, a few miles above its junction with the Tay, on the main roads from Dundee to Blairgowrie and from Perth to Forfar. A small stream, tributary to the Isla, divides the town into two parts. The town is 15 miles north-west from Dundee, 12¾ east-by-north from Perth and 4⅜ south-south-east from Blairgowrie, on the main line of the Caledonian railway, and is the junction of a branch line from Dundee to Blairgowrie. The parish of Coupar-Angus, which is near the base of the Sidlaw Hills, extends for 5 miles along the east bank of the river Isla, and varies from one to two miles in breadth; the surface is arable and meadow land, and is well cultivated and enclosed. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 92, that part of Coupar-Angus formerly in Forfarshire, with a population of 273, has been transferred to this county for civil purposes, but remains in Forfar for parliamentary purposes. The town is governed by a town council, consisting of a provost, two bailies, and six councillors, and is well built and lighted with gas. A new drainage system was introduced in 1885 and completed in 1887, at a cost of about £4,500. The Town Council is the local authority for sanitary affairs, and under its auspices the town is plentifully supplied with good water from the estate of Hallyburton, about two miles south from Coupar-Angus. The church, a modern building erected on the old site, is an edifice in the Gothic style, surrounded by a large graveyard containing a number of ancient tombs and monuments. There are also two United Free churches and Evangelical Union and Original Secession churches. The Episcopal church of St. Anne, built in 1848, will seat 120 persons; the rectory, net value £190, has been held since 1920 by the Rev. John Seton Deuchar M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. The Town Hall, a substantial building in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Mr. James Smart, of Perth, was opened in August, 1887, at a cost of about £3,500, defrayed by public subscription; the public hall is 64 feet in length by 38 feet in breadth, and is capable of seating 600 persons; there are also billiard, recreation and other rooms and a commissioners' hall. The venerable steeple in Queen street is used as a clock tower. The street formerly called Abbey street is now Queen street, to perpetuate the remembrance of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria having passed through Coupar-Angus in 1849. Formerly a fair was held on the third Thursday in March for cattle and horses, but this has been discontinued. Early closing day, Wednesday. There are linen and jute factories, a tannery and preserve works. In the town are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the County and City of Perth Savings Bank. The 'Royal" is the principal hotel. In ancient times this place was the seat of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Malcolm IV. in 1161, and endowed with considerable revenues by that monarch; but at the Reformation the buildings were destroyed by a mob from Perth; the remains, consisting of little more than a single arch and the manse of the United Free church, occupy part of the site of a Roman camp, said to have been formed by the army of Agricola in his seventh expedition. James Carmichael J.P. Miss Brodie-Wood, William D. Graham Menzies esq. and Sir George Kinloch bart. O.B.E. are the principal landowners. Coupar-Angus civil parish has an area of 4,700 acres; burgh, 161 acres; rateable value, landward, £10,581; burghal, £9,637; the population in 1911 was 2,749, of which the burgh contained 2,035; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,400.

CRIEFF is a market town and police burgh under the "General Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is a parish in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination: a sheriff small debt court is held quarterly on the first Saturday in March, June, September and December. The town has a railway station on the Caledonian line and is 22 miles south from Stirling, 17 west from Perth and 6½ east from Comrie, in Upper Strathearn, one of the most delightful districts in Scotland, on the declivity of a hill, forming part of the southern range of the Grampians, having the Earn and several other streams at its foot, and behind it the Knock of Crieff and other eminences, all of a considerable altitude. Upper Strathearn includes the mouths of several important passes, the Sma' Glen being the site of a Roman station, and according to tradition, the burial place of Ossian. It extends also into the highlands of Perthshire, having a wild mountainous region on the one side and rich, soft vales on the other. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), part of Crieff parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Fowlis-Wester, a part with 12 to Muthill, and a part to Monzie and Strowan, without population, and by the same Act, by boundary order 98, a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 134, added to Crieff. The town is governed by a town council, consisting of provost, two bailies and nine councillors. St. Michael's church is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, with a tower on the south-west. Here is also the West parish church, two United Free churches, Congregational, Roman Catholic and Baptist chapels, mission halls and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal churches of St. Columba and St. Michael will hold 625 persons and 120 persons respectively; the Rev. Canon William Macdonald Meredith M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, has been rector since 1897. The Strathearn Institute, in James square, was presented to the townspeople by the late Dr. Thomas Henry Meikle in 1911. The building, formerly an hotel, was considerably altered at a cost of about £4,000, and contains billiard, reading, smoking, refreshment and recreation rooms and a library. Morrison's Academy was endowed by the late Thomas Morrison, builder, Edinburgh, who bequeathed about £20,000 for this purpose, and the trustees purchased the site on which the academy is erected, and have since built a wing at the east end for the rector and for boarders. Taylor's Institution, now a public school, without endowment, was founded and endowed by William Taylor, of Cornton, who died in 1841, and left his whole fortune "for educating the children of the poor in the most useful branches of education." From funds left by the same benefactor, a Free Library and Reading Room was opened in 1891, and contains upwards of 7,800 volumes. The weekly market is held on Tuesday. There is a distillery and a preserve works in the town. The fountain, in James square, was erected in 1893, at a cost of £500, from designs by Messrs. Mossman & Co. of Glasgow, to commemorate the coming of age of Sir William Keith Murray bart. of Ochtertyre, and in recognition of the gift of a water supply to the town by his father, the late Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart.; it is 26 feet in height and 17 at the base, and is built of grey granite, relieved by red granite columns with Corinthian capitals, the whole being surmounted by four dolphins. The arms of the family and those of the burgh appear on different sides. MacRosty Park, to the west of the town, and extending over about ten acres, was presented to the townspeople in 1903 by ex-provost the late James MacRosty, a native of Crieff. The park was laid out by Mr. D. M'Ormish, of Crieff. The Crieff and District Cottage Hospital, erected at a cost of £2,000, by voluntary contributions, was opened in 1906.

Crieff is a thriving and increasing town, deriving no small advantage from the resort in the summer months of invalids and others, who are attracted here by the beauty of the scenery, and the salubrity of the air. The Strathearn Hydropathic Establishment, erected in 1867, at a cost of nearly £30,000, occupies a splendid site in front of the Knock, and overlooks an extensive landscape of varied beauty. Since the erection of the building extensions have been made, a winter garden and loggia having been added. Water of the finest quality is supplied at the rate of 20,000 gallons per day. There is accommodation here for over 300 visitors.

The Old Drummond Arms, in which Prince Charles Edward Stuart passed a night in 1745, was feued by the trustees of the late Lady Willoughby de Eresby to the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and premises for the bank and a large hotel have been erected. In the town are six branch banks and a savings bank. Two newspapers, the "Strathearn Herald" and the "Crieff Advertiser," are published here on Saturday and Thursday respectively. The Earl of Ancaster is the principal landowner and lord of the manor. The area of the civil parish is 11,965 acres; rateable value, £49,018; area of burgh, 763 acres; rateable value, £ ; population in 1901, 5,706, and in the burgh 15,208, and in 1911: parish 6,089, burgh 5,571. Population of the wards: East 2,767, West 2,804; in the ecclesiastical parish, 3,091.

INNERPEFFRAY is a scattered village in the parish of Crieff 3½ miles south-east, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Here is a library, founded by David (Drummond), 3rd Baron Maderty (d. 1684), and containing about 4,000 volumes, principally of a theological and classical nature, for the use of students; there are also a large number of books of fiction. The old castle and church, built in the 16th century by James, 1st Baron Maderty, are now in ruins, and he himself was buried in the family burial place within the chapel in 1623.

MONZIE is an ecclesiastical parish, formed from Crieff and Fowlis Wester, 3 miles north-east from Crieff railway station, on the south side of the Grampians. It was transferred to the civil parish of Crieff in 1895, and has an Established church. Monzie Castle is the seat of David McCowan esq. Population in 1911, 428.

CULROSS was, by an order of the Boundary Commissioners, dated Feb. 23rd, 1891, transferred to Fifeshire, which see.

DALGUISE, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

DEANSTON, see KILMADOCK.

DOUNE is a village and police burgh in the parish of Kilmadock and district of Monteith, and poor combination of Upper Strathearn, with a station on the Dunblane, Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway; it is 44 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 34 miles from Glasgow, 31½ south-west from Perth, 19 south-south-west from Crieff, 8 north-west from Stirling, 8 south-east from Callander and 4 west from Dunblane. The town occupies a pleasant situation on the north bank of the Teith, and consists principally of three streets, radiating from a centre, where the market cross stands, The old bridge which crosses the Teith a little above the castle was erected by Robert Spitall, a native of Stirling, who had amassed a fortune as tailor to Princess Margaret of England, afterwards queen of James IV.; this bridge was widened by three feet in 1866. The Burgh is supplied with water and lighted with gas by the Town Council. The town has its own water supply, and there is excellent sanitation arrangements. The Parish church, erected in 1822, is an edifice in the Gothic style with a tower, built by the late Earl of Moray, heritor of the parish, and owner of Doune Castle. In 1897 it was remodelled and reseated, and a new pulpit and reading desk provided. The United Free church was built in 1867 to replace that erected in 1843. There is also a United Free church at BRIDGE OF TEITH. The Episcopal church of St. Modoc, built in 1878, will seat 110 persons. The Rev. Lawrence Shafto Campbell-Colquhoun has been rector since 1911. The Roman Catholic church, dedicated to SS. Fillan and Alphonsus, was built in 1875 at a cost of about £3,300 and will seat 300. A Town Hall, to seat 500 persons, the gift of Sir A. Kay Muir bart. of Blair Drummond, is now (1921) in course of erection and is expected to be completed by the end of the year. Placed on a platform three feet above the road level and adjoining the new Town Hall, an obelisk with a cross raised on the front face has been erected as a war memorial. The obelisk is 30 feet in height and inscribed on the base are the names of those of the district who fell in the Great War. The sites for both the Town Hall and the war memorial were presented to the burgh by the Earl of Moray. Fairs used to be held on the second Wednesday in May, the last Wednesday in July, the first Tuesday and Wednesday and the fourth Wednesday in November. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. There is a nine-hole golf course. Doune Castle, originally completed at the end of the 14th century, by Robert Stewart, Earl of Monteith and first Duke of Albany, was formerly the family seat of the Earls of Monteith, and the ruins of this once noble castle stand in the immediate neighbourhood of Doune, upon an elevated peninsula formed by the junction of the Ardoch water with the Teith. To judge from the massiveness and extent of its remains, the castle appears to have belonged to that first-class order of Scottish fortresses of which those of Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbarton afford entire specimens; the castle buildings form a large quadrangle, the hall and domestic apartments occupying the front or north side and about half the west side; the remainder surrounding the rest of the courtyard has a wall 37 feet high and 7 feet thick, and a tower 80 feet in height: in 1883 and 1884 this building was partially restored by George, fourteenth Earl of Moray, who was hereditary keeper of the Castle; a considerable portion has been roofed in, and part of the interior, notably the baronial hall, has been restored to its original condition: the outer walls and battlements have also been repaired so as to show the original structure and extent of the edifice: James II. of Scotland, when an infant, was an inmate of this fortress, which formed part of the dowry of Margaret of Denmark, Queen of James III. and also of Margaret Tudor, Queen of James IV. who sometimes resided in the castle: Mary Queen of Scots also resided here occasionally, and her son James VI. made frequent visits to the castle: the last historical episode in which Doune Castle was connected, was during the rebellion of 1745-46, when it was garrisoned by the adherents of Prince Charles Edward. The area of the burgh is 219 acres; rateable value, £5,141; the population in 1911 was 893.

DRON is a parish, 5 miles south from Perth, in the south-eastern extremity of Perthshire, extending into the beautiful district of Strathearn, and is divided from Abernethy on the east by the Farg rivulet. Although in some parts the surface is broken and irregular, in the lower portion the land is flat and fertile as belonging to the rich carse of the Earn. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of Dunbarney parish without population has been annexed to Dron. The Glenfarg section of the North British Railway Co. constructed in connection with the Forth Bridge, passes through the parish of Dron, and has a junction with the North British main line at Bridge of Earn. The church, a Gothic edifice, is a fine object on the rising ground to the left, on approaching the Bridge of Earn from the south. In the churchyard lie the remains of the Rev. John Wellwood, a celebrated preacher in the time of the persecution under Charles II. In the parish is the ancient castle of Balmanno, built between 1570 and 1580, which was once the seat of the Murrays, lords of Balmanno. At the back of the hill opposite the church is a famous rocking stone. Near the village stands a ruined chapel, and there are traces of another where Pottie mill now stands. This parish has an area of 4,342 acres; rateable value, £4,721; population in 1911, 256.

DULL is a large parish, in Atholl, Weem and Breadalbane poor combination, and is 30 miles long by about 12 in breadth. The river Tummel bounds the district on the north, and the Lyon and Tay on the south; these rivers abound with excellent salmon, and the lakes (of which there are fifteen, large and small) contain fine trout, pike and eels. The military road from Stirling to Inverness passes through the entire length of the parish. The mountain Schiehallion, which has a height of 3,500 feet, is seen on the northern border. The village is about 4 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station, on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway, about 23 north from Crieff and 20 north-west from Dunkeld. Here is an Established church, and at Tummel Bridge a United Free church. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dull parish has been added to the parishes of Blair Atholl, Logie and Weem, and by boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Fortingall, Kenmore, Logierait and Weem have been added to Dull. Francis Willey esq. is the principal landowner. The area is 56,149 acres; rateable value, £20,824; the population of the civil parish in 1911 was 2,361 civil, of which 1,592 are in Aberfeldy police burgh, and 406 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DUNBARNEY parish is in the south-eastern part of the county, occupying a rich portion of the Lower Strathearn district, about 3½ miles south from Perth; it is bounded by the hill of Moredun (or Moncreiffe) on the north, and on the west by Forgandenny, and is intersected by the river Earn, here crossed by a bridge which gives its name to the village mentioned below. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of this parish, without population, has been transferred to Dron parish. The remains of a Pictish camp exist on the summit of Moredun, and there is a very complete stone circle a little way to the west of Moncreiffe House. Moncreiffe House, the seat of Col. Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. C.M.G., A.D.C., V.D., D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion, the grounds of which are very extensive and beautifully wooded. Easter Moncreiffe also belongs to Col. Sir R. D. Moncreiffe bart. C.M.G., A.D.C., V.D., D.L., J.P. The scenery around is beautiful and romantic. Kilgraston House, which has been gifted by Col. Grant to the Government, is now used as a military hospital for disabled soldiers. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. C.M.G., A.D.C., V.D., D.L., J.P. Lawrence Pullar esq. and William S. Miller esq. This parish has an area of 3,906 acres; rateable value, £8,806; in 1911 the population was 862.

BRIDGE OF EARN is a village in this parish, about 3½ miles south from Perth, with a junction station on the Glenfarg and Fife sections of the North British railway, and is lighted with gas supplied by Perth Corporation Gas Department. The village has Established and United Free churches, and of late years has become a great place of resort on account of the celebrity of its mineral springs. Pitkeathly Wells and Spa, now leased by Schweppes Limited, are 1 mile from the station; the waters have long been celebrated for their curative effect in cases of gout, rheumatism, affections of the stomach, liver, kidneys &c. &c. There are tennis courts and bowling greens, a curling club, and good shooting and fishing is to be obtained in the district. Population in 1911, 349.

The parish also contains the village of KINTILLO, where in the reign of Alexander III. the king held a court for testing the national weights and measures.

DUNBLANE is an ancient city, police burgh and parish, with which, in 1899, by an Order of the Secretary for Scotland, was incorporated the old parish of Lecropt. It stands on the banks of the river Allan, which flows through a great part of the parish, and contains trout, besides salmon and grilse in their season. The country to the south of the town is very beautiful, and is finally diversified with plantations. The ride from Dunblane to Bridge of Allan by Glen road is justly admired. The vale of Strathallan, through which the river flows, lies to the north and east of the town. The fields on the banks of the river are fertile, but as the land approaches the hills it is of the character of moorland although excellently adapted for pasture, the dairy produce of this district being in high repute. At the lower end of the town is the romantic walk of Kippenross, near to the end of which is a plane tree, supposed to be the largest in Scotland, the circumference of the trunk in the smallest part being nearly 20 feet, where the branches separate fully 27 feet, and close to the ground 42 feet 7 inches. The height of the tree is 100 feet, and it is said to have attained the age of over 470 years. Sheriffmuir, a mountain 1,175 feet high, is in this parish. The Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway passes through and has a station here, and the Dunblane, Doune and Callander branch commences in the town, which is the capital of the western district of Perthshire, and is 41 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 33 north-east from Glasgow, 28 south-west from Perth and 11 south-east from Callander. The town is a police burgh under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Acts, 1892 and 1903, and the Town Council (Scotland) Act, 1900. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts and for ordinary business is held every Wednesday, and justice of peace courts occasionally. The court house and prison are modern buildings. That portion of the town which adjoins the church consists chiefly of old houses, and has much the appearance of the precincts of a cathedral. The good and learned Robert Leighton, Bishop of Dunblane (1661-74), bequeathed his valuable library to the clergy of the diocese, and it is now kept in a suitable building called the Leighton Library, to which the public have access on application to the librarian or the parish minister. The see of Dunblane was founded, it is believed, by King David I. in 1140, although St. Blane, a contemporary of St. Columba, is affirmed to have been bishop or prior of a monastery here as early as A.D. 600; this institution was afterwards occupied by the Culdees, and it was during their occupation that the establishment of the diocese by King David was carried out. Since the Reformation the cathedral has been used as the parish church, and ceased to be the seat of a bishop, except under its first and second Protestant Episcopates. The Cathedral, dedicated to St. Blane, stands on the bank of Allan Water; it dates from about 1230-50, and is a graceful example of Early English and Decorated work, with the exception of the tower, 128 feet in height, which stands partly within and partly without the south aisle and obliquely to the line of the aisle: the first four stages of this tower are Norman (c. 1100-10), and belong to the church reared by David I.; the two upper stages date from the 16th century, and the embattled parapet was added by Bishop William Chisholm II. (1564-75); from within it rises a short octagonal spire with vane. A chime of 9 bells has been added, and was used for the first time on the occasion of the visit of His late Majesty King Edward VII. on the 28th of September, 1908; the two old bells are preserved in the north aisle. The cathedral, as now existing, consists of a choir with six large windows on the north side containing good modern stained glass, a vaulted north aisle of five bays, and a long chamber over it, used partly as an organ loft, and nave of eight bays with aisles, the easternmost bay of which has a gable, both on the north and south side, and appears like a small transept; there is no triforium, but the clerestory has an elegant traceried double arcading, with a passage way between, which is continued through the three similarly designed and graceful lights in the west front; the west doorway is recessed in five orders, and flanked by smaller blind arches, and in the western gable is a vesica window which has been specially noticed by Mr. Ruskin: the east window of the choir is of four lights, with geometric tracery in the head, and is curiously flanked by two narrow lancets of lesser height. The east and west windows are stained. The carved oak choir stalls, screen under east window, and organ case were the gift in 1914 of John Graham Stewart esq. Towards the close of the 16th century, the nave was allowed to become ruinous, and the choir alone was used for divine service, but this, at a later date, was much disfigured by the erection of galleries, one of which was built across the east window; in 1818 the galleries were for the most part removed, and an attempt was made to renew the tracery of the choir windows, a partial restoration of the church was carried out in 1870, but the complete restoration of the building was not effected till 1889-93, when, chiefly owing to the munificence of the late Mrs. Wallace, of Glassingall, the nave, so far as necessary, was rebuilt, all the old work being scrupulously respected, and the fabric generally renovated, at a cost of £25,000, under the direction of Sir R. Rowland Anderson LL.D. architect, of Edinburgh, and it was reopened 28 Oct. 1893, by Schomberg Henry, 9th Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C. (d. 1900), when a special dedicatory service was held. Although much of the ancient woodwork is lost, the choir retains some richly carved canopied oak stalls, and has now a new open traceried screen of carved oak with panelled base, in a combination of the Gothic and Renaissance styles: the new pulpit, correspondingly designed, is octagonal, and has figures at the angles, under canopies, and there is a brass lectern; the nave has now a wagon roof of dark oak, the ribs of which are relieved by emblazoned shields. On the north side of the choir, within a recessed arch, is the altar tomb, with effigy, of Bishop Clement (1233-58), to whom the erection of the cathedral is chiefly due; there is also an effigy under a triangular recess, of Bishop Ochiltree (1430-48); figures of Malise, 5th Earl of Stratherne, and his wife, ob. 1271, carved out of a monolith of gritstone, and an arched tomb of Italian design, said to have belonged to the Drummonds, of Strathallan, to whom there are also some ledgers, now despoiled of their brasses, on the choir floor: there are also on the choir floor three stone slabs, each bearing a brass under which, according to tradition, Margaret Drummond and her two sisters were buried in 1501: in the north aisle stands a Celtic cross. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 226 feet, width of nave 67 feet, and of the choir 57 feet. A Parish Hall, adjacent to the cathedral, was erected in 1904, under the direction of Sir R. Rowland Anderson. There are also two United Free churches, and a Catholic church. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1845, will seat 245 persons; the Rev. Edward Martin Fincham Machugh B.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1909.

A Reading Room was erected in 1908, and a hall in 1910, the latter being in connection with the East United Free church, the site for both being given by James Templeton esq. of Holme hill. The Queen Victoria School, situate about one mile north, on the Perth road, was erected in 1908, at a cost of £60,000, for the sons of Scottish soldiers and sailors, as a memorial to the late Queen Victoria, and a chapel was built within the school grounds as a memorial to the Scottish sailors and soldiers who lost their lives in the South African war of 1899-1902; the cost of these buildings was defrayed by Scottish regiments, counties, burghs and individuals, and provide for 18 students and 275 boys. The school was opened on 28th September, 1908, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. who, on the same day, laid the foundation stone of the chapel; the latter was opened on the 18th June, 1910. A gymnasium, tailors' and woodwork shops, student class-rooms and quartermaster's offices and stores have been added; in 1913 a hospital for 14 patients was built through the generosity of the Anderson trustees. By a minute of agreement between the Subscribers' Executive Committee and the then Secretary of State for War, dated 26th January, 1905, the former undertook to expend all sums subscribed toward the erection and completion of the school and chapel, and the latter agreed to take over the institution when completed, and thereafter to maintain and conduct it on educational lines similar to those obtaining at the Duke of York's Royal Military School. Regiments, counties, burghs, and individual subscribers are entitled to nominate boys (up to a maximum number of five each). A subscription of £250 in the case of regiments, and of £500 in other cases, gives the right to nominate one boy and to name one bed. Boys must be lawful sons of soldiers or ex-soldiers of Scottish regiments, or of Scotsmen serving, or who have served, in the army, navy, militia (now Special Reserve), or volunteer service companies. The school enjoys the distinction of carrying colours similar to those borne by infantry battalions. The King's colour is of the universal pattern; the school colour is of special design. These colours were presented by His late Majesty King Edward VII. to a detachment which attended at Balmoral Castle on the 4th October, 1909. A combined swimming bath and rifle range was added to the school through the generosity of Edmund Pullar esq. Westerton House, Bridge of Allan.

There are two public schools, and one belonging to the Episcopal church. Dunblane is a place of limited trade, and not conspicuous as one of manufactures, but worsted spinning is carried on very extensively. In High street are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The city is much resorted to in the summer season as a watering place, there being an excellent mineral spring in the vicinity on the property of Col. Arthur William Henry Hay-Drummond J.P. A market, as well as numerous fairs, were formerly held, but all have now fallen into disuse. A few miles from the town is Sheriffmuir, on which a severe, but indecisive, conflict took place 13 November, 1715, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Argyll, and the army of the Prince James Stuart, commanded by the Earl of Mar. Here on the summit of the hill are some large stones inclosed by iron rails, said to be placed where the standard was erected. Prince Charles arrived in Dunblane on the 11th of September, 1745, on his way to the Low Country, and remained a night at the house of the Laird of Balhaldie. The room in which the prince held his levee, on the morning of his departure, is shown to visitors. Dunblane bestows the title of viscount on the Duke of Leeds. About half way between Dunblane and the Bridge of Allan is Keir House, the residence of Brig.-Gen. Archibald Stirling D.L., J.P., C.C.; the grounds are laid out with great taste, and contain fine specimens of forest trees and ornamental flower gardens; they are thrown open to visitors from 2 till 5 on Wednesdays. Kilbryde Castle, the property of Sir John A. C. Campbell bart. is occupied by Charles Donaldson esq. Kippenross House is the property of Capt. J. A. Stirling and occupied by James S. Spencer esq. Kippendavie House, the property of Capt. John Alexander Stirling, is occupied by Mrs. Osborne; Cromlix is the residence of Col. Arthur William Henry Hay-Drummond J.P. Capt. John Alexander Stirling is the principal landowner. Dunblane parish has an area of 22,873 acres; rateable value of burghal, £20,853; landward, £18,606; population in 1901, 3,812, of which the town numbered 2,516, and in 1911, parish, 4,591; town, 2,978, including 193 boys and 103 officials and their families in Queen Victoria Memorial School.

On the river Allan, about 2 miles north of Dunblane, has been erected the small village of ASHFIELD, where are situated extensive works belonging to the well known firm of Messrs. Robert Pullar and Sons, calico spinners &c.

DUNKELD AND DOWALLY

DUNKELD and DOWALLY form a united parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dunkeld and Dowally, with 74 persons, added to Logierait, and by Boundary Orders 73 and 74, a part of Caputh parish, with a population of 489, also the village of Butterstone, has been transferred to Dunkeld and Dowally.

Dunkeld is a small town and burgh of barony, with a station on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway (locally in Birnam), and is 57 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh (by rail 60), 24 east from Kenmore, 15 north-north-west from Perth and 12 west from Blairgowrie; it is delightfully situated in an amphitheatre of hills, at the spot where the Highlands and Lowlands appear to meet, and on the river Tay, here spanned by a fine bridge of seven arches, with a total span of 685 feet, completed in 1809 from the plans of Telford, the famous engineer, at a cost of upwards of £30,000. The scenery around Dunkeld has long been the subject of admiration, and the town is the resort of many tourists. Dunkeld, as a burgh of barony, is governed by a baron bailie, who is appointed by the Duke of Atholl. A justice of the peace court is held for granting publicans' certificates, game dealers' licences &c. The town is of great antiquity and was the capital of the ancient Caledonia. The see of Dunkeld may be said to have taken its rise from the Culdee monastery, founded here in or previous to the 9th century by monks from Iona, who also translated hither the relics of St. Columba, and preserved them here until their final transmission to Ireland: there are records of bishops from A.D. 849, and they then held precedence over all others in Scotland, a privilege continued to the prelates of Dunkeld until the creation of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews in 1470. In 1127, King David I. reconstituted the abbey as a house of canons regular, and appointed Gregory, then abbot, as bishop of Dunkeld, while retaining at the same time his monastic office; the abbey church of St. Columba naturally became the cathedral, and though now for the most part ruinous, it is yet a very stately structure, and its attractiveness is much enhanced by the beauty of its situation amid a grove of trees within the private demesne of the Duke of Atholl, and close to the river Tay; it consists of a long aisleless choir of four bays, with a vaulted chapter house of two bays on the north side, nave of seven bays with aisles and south porch, a tall octagonal stair turret on the south side of the west doorway, and a north-west tower completed in 1501, 25 feet square and 96 feet in height, with an open quatre-foiled parapet, angle turret and dwarf pinnacles; the total length, measured externally, is 240 feet, the width of the choir being 39 feet and of the nave and aisles 67 feet: the earliest existing portion of the fabric is the south wall of the choir, c. 1220-50; the rest of the choir is of later date and was the work of Bishop Sinclair in the first half of the 14th century: the choir was reopened in 1908, after restoration by the late Sir Donald Currie G.C.M.G. (d. 1909). The chapter house, begun in 1457, was finished in 1469, and has an upper chamber or muniment room; in 1380 the church was burnt by the English, and probably on account of the damage thus caused, the nave was rebuilt as it now stands, during the period 1436-47; the arcades have massive but short circular piers, with plain caps, carrying boldly moulded arches; the triforium openings consist in each case of a single semi-circular arch divided into two pointed arches; the clerestory is lighted by simply pointed windows with cusped tracery, but their interior splay is rudely plain; the great west window, singularly placed off the centre both of the gable and the entrance, still retains some fragments of its once elaborate traceried work; in the aisles the tracery of some of the windows is still perfect; the western doorway has its outer arch carried on square piers splayed at the base, and has within six orders of shafts and mouldings; on either side of it is a blind arch slightly recessed: in 1599 the cathedral again suffered great damage, the rood screen, stalls and many monuments being destroyed; after this the services were held only in the choir, the nave being dismantled and allowed to become ruinous: in 1689, after the battle of Killiecrankie, the victorious Highlanders attacked Dunkeld, and the cathedral, into which the troops of William III. had thrown themselves, was severely injured by fire and in other ways; but the choir was repaired by the Murrays in 1691 and again in 1762 by the Government at a cost of £300, and was rebuilt in 1820 by the Duke of Atholl, at a cost of £5,000: the chapter house, now serving only as a vestibule to the ducal pew, contains a mural monument of the 17th century, and on the south side another in the Renaissance style, displaying heraldically all the principal alliances of the Stewart-Murrays, dukes of Atholl, and on the east side is a statue of John, 4th Duke K.T., F.R.S. who died 29 Sept. 1830, and is buried here; in the south-east angle of the choir is the fine tomb with recumbent effigy of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, 4th son of King Robert II. and commonly known from his rapacious character as "the wolf of Badenoch," d. 24 July, 1394; beside it lies the headless effigy of Bishop William Sinclair (1309-24), and here also stands part of a Celtic cross; on the opposite side are stairs leading to a gallery which extends along that side, and there are sedilia on both sides, but the east end of the choir is now partitioned off and merely serves as a vestibule to the remaining part: the south aisle of the nave, originally vaulted, contains the tomb with recumbent effigy of Bishop de Cardeny (1407-36); the front of the tomb is ornamented with figures of angels under canopies and holding shields, and over it is a low but much enriched recessed arch with elaborately carved crockets and finial; there is a piscina at the east end of this wall; the area of the nave has long been used as a cemetery, and the base of the tower, which is vaulted, is used as a tool house. The United Free church was erected in 1874, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, on the old site, and has a tower and spire, and a memorial window to a former Earl of Dalhousie: there is also a Catholic church. James VI. made a grant for erecting a grammar school, called the Royal School of Dunkeld, which still exists. The City Hall, in Atholl street, is a building of stone, with a gallery, and holds 350 persons. The manufacture of linen goods was formerly the staple trade of Dunkeld, but has now become extinct. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and two superior hotels, the Duke of Atholl's Arms Hotel and the Royal Hotel. A fountain was erected in 1866 as a memorial to George Augustus Frederick John, sixth Duke of Atholl, who died 16 Jan. 1864. Dunkeld House is a seat of the noble family of Stewart-Murray, Dukes of Atholl, and the gardens and extensive pleasure grounds present many attractive features, including Ossian's Hall, the Rumbling Bridge, and several falls of the river Bran. The Duke of Atholl K.T., C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish of Dunkeld and Dowally is 15,293 acres; rateable value, £7,684; the population in 1911 was 1,061 in the civil and 893 in the ecclesiastical parish, and 664 in Dunkeld ward.

DOWALLY is a parish, united with that of Dunkeld, and is one mile south from Guay station (which is in the village) on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and about 5 miles north from Dunkeld. The present church was built in 1818, nearly on the site of that erected by George Brown, bishop of Dunkeld 1484-1516: some of the materials of the old church were made use of in constructing the new building, and these include a block of stone bearing the arms of Bishop Brown, a tombstone to one of the Dalguise family and a stone fashioned like a bell. The Duke of Atholl K.T., C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O. is the landowner.

BUTTERSTONE is a small village about 4½ miles north-west from Dunkeld, formerly in the parish of Caputh, but has been transferred to Dunkeld.

KINDALLACHAN is a small village in this parish.

LITTLE DUNKELD, contrary to its distinctive appellative, is an extensive parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, on the west or right bank of the Tay, near the confluence of the Bran with that river. The parish of Little Dunkeld is traversed by the military road from Perth to Inverness, and by the Highland railway, which intersects the parish throughout its entire length, about 14 miles. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Fowlis Wester parish has been added to Little Dunkeld. The parish forms a kind of irregular triangle, and is disposed by nature into four districts, viz.:—Murthly, Birnam, the Bishopric, and Strathbraan. Birnam, Dalguise, Gellyburn, Inver, Meikle Trochry, Murthly, Drumour, Strathbraan and Torwood are small villages in the parish of Little Dunkeld, from one to six miles distant. The first district is that of Murthly, extending from Kinclaven to the "Pass of Birnam." It includes the villages of Gellyburn and Murthly, where there is a station on the Highland railway, about 10 miles north from Perth, and has an Established church. The Perth District Mental Hospital, adjoining the station, is a fine square building, surrounded by beautiful grounds, which are kept in order by the patients. Pinel Lodge Convelescent House, opened in November, 1895, and Tuke Lodge, in November, 1896, together provide accommodation for 100 convalescent patients, and are carried on in connection with the main asylum. Murthly Castle, the seat of Lt.-Col. Walter Thomas James Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham D.L., J.P. is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style, with grounds upwards of three square miles in extent, and containing avenues and terraces of the finest and rarest trees in the country. In this district is also Dalpowie House, and the charming shooting lodge of Rohallion. The soil of this district (all of which belongs to Lt.-Col. W. T. J. Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham) is fertile and well cultivated; the surface of the country is beautifully varied, and the fields well enclosed. The second and central district of the parish is Birnam, in the midst of which Birnam Hill (rendered classic by Shakespeare's reference to it in "Macbeth," Act V.) rises in rude magnificence from the edge of the river. From the summit of Birnam Hill an unrivalled view is obtained in every direction, and its slate quarries (now closed) were wrought with profit from an early period. At the base of the hill are the villages of Torwood and Birnam, while about one mile to the west is the village of Inver, the birthplace, in 1727, of the famous Scottish violinist and musical composer, Neil Gow, who died in 1807; it is pleasantly situated at the confluence of the rivers Tay and Bran. Acreage of the parish, 44,607; rateable value, £21,274; population in 1911, 2,113, including 56 officials and 378 inmates of Perth District Mental Hospital; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,945.

BIRNAM is a beautiful modern village, about three-quarters of a mile from Dunkeld, and is well drained and supplied with gas and water, and contains the Dunkeld station of the Highland railway. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, situated here, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and has a tower containing one bell: the Rev. William Clements Gwyther M.A. Keble College, Oxford, has been rector since 1912. Birnam Institute includes a reading room and library, recreation and refreshment rooms, and a public hall. The institute grounds are furnished with seats under the shade of spreading beeches. There is also an hotel here, which contains a public hall. Erigmore is the residence of Col. J. Ludlow Ferries. The population of Birnam in 1911 was 489.

The third district of the parish of Little Dunkeld extends from Inver, along the banks of the Tay, to Grandtully, a space of 10 miles; here the fields are level, and the whole has the appearance of an almost continued series of beautiful gardens. It includes a stretch of fine country called "The Bishopric," and contains the village of Dalguise, where there is a station of the Highland railway, and near which are the mansions of Dalguise House and Kinnaird.

BALNAGUARD is a village with an inn at the extreme end of the district.

The fourth district is STRATHBRAAN, a valley about 9 miles in length through which flows the river Bran. In the lower portion the soil is fertile and well tilled, but the upper portion is poor and unproductive. In this strath is Drumour Lodge; the shootings attached are very extensive.

Near the centre of Strathbraan is the village of TROCHRY, containing a United Free church and the ruins of a famous old castle, once a seat of the Earls of Gowrie. At the upper extremity of the parish lies the village of Amulree.

DUNNING is a rather extensive parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village is near the centre of the parish, on the banks of the Dunning water (a tributary of the Earn), and on the road from Stirling to Perth, and is half a mile north from the base of the Ochil hills, about 2 south from the river Earn, 9 south-west from Perth and 5 east from Auchterarder, with a station on the Gleneagles and Perth section of the Caledonian line. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 12, a part of Auchterarder, without population, has been transferred to Dunning. There is an Established church with an ancient tower, and a United Free church. At Duncrub Park is a private Episcopal chapel, built in 1850, and seating 100 persons. This place was destroyed by fire in 1715, by the Earl of Mar's army, on the retreat from Sheriffmuir to Perth. A corn market is held on Wednesday. Here is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and of the County and City of Perth Savings Bank: there are Bowling, Curling, Golf and Tennis Clubs and a Library and Reading Room. Duncrub Park, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Rollo J.P. who is the principal landowner and lord of the manor, is situated here. Keltie Castle, Garvock House, the residence of Col. Charles de Jersey Graeme, and Kippen House, the residence of Lady Wilson, are in this parish. The civil parish comprises 14,878 acres; rateable value, £13,738; population in 1911, 1,145.

ERROL is a parish in the Carse of Gowrie, 5½ miles in length and nearly 3 in breadth, stretching across the Carse from the foot of the hills to the banks of the Firth of Tay. The soil is rich and fertile and under most productive tillage; it is also highly favourable to the growth of fruit trees, and is intersected with small tracts of water called "pows," collected chiefly from the trenches opened for draining the grounds. The village, which is lighted with gas, has a station about one mile north on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway, and is 10 miles east from Perth, occupying a beautiful situation on a rising ground, embowered in trees, commanding a prospect of the Tay and Carse almost as far east as Dundee. A rivulet flows past to the Tay, and forms a small harbour at its mouth. This place, since 1453, has afforded the title of Earl to a branch of the Hay family, and from a date anterior to 1309, hereditary Lord High Constables of Scotland. The parish church occupies a commanding site, and its tower may be seen at a considerable distance. There is also a United Free church. Megginch Castle is the residence of Captain Malcolm Drummond D.L., J.P.; Errol Park, of Lady Ogilvy-Dalgleish, and Fingask Castle, of Sir John Henderson Stewart bart. Acreage of the parish, 9,533; rateable value, £21,476; population in 1911, 2,083, of which the ward contained 1,934.

FORTEVIOT is a parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Perth, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is 7 miles south-west from Perth, in the district of Strathearn, the greater portion of the parish being in the vale of the Earn, that river passing through it. The middle portion is beautifully wooded and enclosed, and is intersected by the May, which joins the Earn nearly opposite Dupplin Castle, the seat of Lord Forteviot D.L., J.P. The river May winds through the verdant knolls of the Ochils, and thence through the picturesque grounds of Invermay, flowing on and forming several beautiful falls, until it becomes lost for a time in the intricate course of the Hummel Bummel, a cataract at Muckersie Linn, with a perpendicular fall of 30 feet. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 39, a part of Forgandenny parish, with a population of 127, has been transferred to Forteviot. The village of Forteviot, which is on the right bank of the river Earn, was the ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom, and has an Established church: there is also a United Free church at Pathstruie. At BANKHEAD, near Dupplin Castle, is an ancient cross; and there is another on the opposite height of Dronochy, both supposed to mark the approach to Haly Hill, where, in the time of Charles I. vestiges of a palace were in existence. It was on the heights of Bankhead the battle of Dupplin was fought, 11 Aug. 1332, between the Scotch under the Earl of Mar and Edward Balliol, when the former were defeated, after which Balliol was crowned king of Scotland. Lord Forteviot D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The parish has an area of 9,886 acres; rateable value, £7,763; population in 1911, 549 civil and 524 ecclesiastical.

KENMORE is a parish and village in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, lying in the Highland district of Breadalbane, surrounding Loch Tay, which is 16 miles in length, and from one to two in breadth. The waters of the lake, which seldom or never freeze, abound with salmon and other fish. About midway down the Loch Tay rises Ben Lawers, a mountain 3,984 feet in height. The village of Kenmore occupies an eminence at the north-east end of the loch, close by the point where it becomes a river, over which is a bridge of five arches, and is 6 miles south-west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway, 80 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-west from Perth and 24 west from Dunkeld. There are Established and United Free churches. At Taymouth, at the north end of the loch, is the private Episcopal chapel of St. James, the property of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. which seats 70 persons; attached to it is a Mission at Killin. At Ardeonaig, near the south-east point of the loch, and at Lawers, on the opposite side, are United Free churches. This is a favourite point in a tour of the Highlands, and is much visited in summer. In the parish is Meall Ghaordie mountain, which rises to the height of 3,407 feet, and Ben Dheickach, 3,074 feet high. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of this parish have been transferred to the parishes of Dull, Killin, and Fortingal, and a part of Killin and Weem annexed to Kenmore. In the vale below the village are the park and castle of Taymouth, the seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. who is the principal landowner. The mansion has been much enlarged and improved, and now ranks amongst the most elegant modern castellated mansions in Scotland. The Breadalbane hotel is a well appointed hostelry, picturesquely situated at the foot of Loch Tay. The parish contains an area of 57,273 acres; rateable value, £8,645; the population in 1911 was 1,106 civil and 986 ecclesiastical parish.

ACHARN is a small village in Kenmore parish, on the east side of Loch Tay, about 2 miles south-west from the village of Kenmore and 8 south-west from Aberfeldy railway station. Near the village, in a woody glen, are the celebrated Falls of Acharn. Opposite to the greatest fall, where the water suddenly precipitates itself over a projecting rock at a height of about 250 feet, is a grotto called the "Hermitage."

KILLIECRANKIE, see MOULIN.

KILLIN is a mountainous and extensive parish in the Highland district of Breadalbane, and is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district; the village occupies a delightful and picturesque situation at the west end of the celebrated Loch Tay, and near the confluence of the rivers Lochay and Dochart with the waters of the lake; it is 74 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-north-west from Stirling, 27 west-by-north from Crieff, 22½ north from Callander, and 16 south-west from Kenmore. The Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway is connected by the Killin line, by which Kenmore is brought into nearer contact through the Loch Tay steamers. This line is one of the finest in Scotland for grandeur of scenery. Anglers residing at the hotels have trout fishing free of charge in Loch Tay, which is one of the largest and most beautiful lochs in Scotland, and for salmon fishing, the season for which opens on the 15th of January, it is surpassed by none. The Falls of Lochy are about 3 miles from Killin, and are well worth a visit. The scenery between Killin and Kenmore can be seen to the best advantage from the deck of one of the Loch Tay steamers. The west, or Killin end, is grand and wild, the mountains rising to a great height, and their serrated ridges present many jagged and fantastic sky-lines. Some rare ferns and cairn-gorm stones are found here. In the parish are the peaks of Ben More, 3,843 feet, and Ben Laoigh, 3,708 feet in height, and near the latter is the source of the river Tay. The village is noted for the picturesque beauty of its situation, and, like Kenmore, is a favourite point of tour of the central Highlands. To view the scenery to advantage the traveller is advised to take the road on the south-east side of the lake. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Killin parish, with a population of 122, has been transferred to Kenmore, and a part of the parish of Kenmore, with 61, and Weem, with 40 population, added to Killin. There are Established and United Free churches. The private Episcopal chapel of St. Fillan, built in 1876, will seat 150 persons; the chaplaincy, annexed to that of Taymouth, is in the gift of the Marquess of Breadalbane, and has been held since 1908 by the Rev. W. L. Lewis. In Killin village is a monument of polished granite, erected by the Gaelic Society of Perth, to the Rev. James Stewart, for 52 years minister of Killin, and the first translator of the New Testament into Scottish Gaelic. He was born in 1700, and died in 1789. On a small island here, formed by two branches of the river, is the burial place of the clan M'Nab. On one of the trees of the island may be seen a branch, which, severed from its parent stem by a storm in February, 1806, attached itself to a neighbouring tree, and is now growing with its branches downwards. A small eminence in the neighbourhood of Killin is pointed out as the place of sepulture of the famed Highland hero Fingal. Auchmore House, the property of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. and the residence of Mrs. Mackinnon, is at the head of the loch on the south side, and opposite, on the north side, is the picturesque old burying ground and mausoleum of the Breadalbane family. The ivy-covered ruins of Finlarig Castle, one of the oldest seats of the Barons of Breadalbane, are close to the vault. In the gardens of Auchmore is a black Hamburg vine, covering 475 square yards of glass, and growing from a single stem which measures 22 inches at a height of 3 feet from the ground, and is the largest vine in Europe. The Marquess of Breadalbane, William Christie esq. the trustees of the late Edward Gordon Place and Col. Colin John Campbell are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 116,176 acres; rateable value, £22,448; population, 1911, 1,412 parish; ward, 573, and ecclesiastical parish, 913.

CLIFTON is a small village in the western part of the civil parish, half a mile from Tyndrum stations on the West Highland section of the North British railway, and the Oban section of the Caledonian railway.

CRIANLARICH and TYNDRUM are stations on the Callander and Oban railway, and the West Highland section of the North British railway; each has an hotel and a bowling green, while at CRIANLARICH there is also a 9 hole golf course.

STRATHFILLAN, 14 miles south from Killin, is a quoad sacra parish formed from Killin parish in Perthshire, and Glenorchy and Inishail parish in Argyllshire, and has Established and United Free churches; it includes the villages of Clifton, Crianlarich and Tyndrum. The population in 1911 was 665, of which 167 were in Argyllshire.

KINNAIRD is a parish and village in the carse of Gowrie, from 11 to 12 miles east from Perth. This place affords the title of Baron Kinnaird of Inchture to the Kinnaird family, who are also, by a later creation, barons Kinnaird of Rossie. The church is about 5 miles north-by-west from Inchture station on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway. Kinnaird Castle was built by Alexander, surnamed the Fierce, for the suppression of robbers who infested the Carse of Gowrie from the north, and remained in the possession of the Crown until 1172: James VI. in the course of his visit to Scotland in 1617, spent upwards of a week at Kinnaird Castle, arriving on the 22nd of May and leaving for Dundee on the 30th of May; the castle, now ruinous, belongs to Sir John Henderson Stewart bart. The area is 3,495 acres; rateable value, £2,873; the population in 1911 was 172.

KINNOULL is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Perth, and has its western extremity on the Tay, opposite Perth, extending thence in an irregular manner for nearly 4 miles, with a general breadth of 1 mile. The surface is hilly, but romantic and exceedingly beautiful, being covered to a great extent with fine plantations. Many villas have been erected on the rising grounds to the east of the river, and now form a part of the burgh of Perth known as Bridgend and Barnhill. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, parts of Kinfauns and Scone have been transferred to this parish, and a part of Kinnoull added to the parishes of Kinfauns, St. Madoes, St. Martins and Scone. Kinnoull Hill is above 700 feet perpendicular, and affords an enchanting prospect of the surrounding country. The ancient church of the parish was a rectory, in the proprietary of the monastery of Cambuskenneth, and was dedicated to St. Constantine. The modern church, erected in 1826, stands on a bank overhanging the Tay. Near this once stood the old castle of Kinnoull. Kinnoull has given the title of earl to a branch of the family of Hay of Erroll, Sir George Hay, lord chancellor, 1622, being ennobled in 1627 as Baron Hay of Kinfauns and Viscount Dupplin, and elevated to the earldom in 1633 as Earl of Kinnoull. The Earl is the principal landowner. The area is 3,331 acres: rateable value, landward £3,011, burghal (part of Perth) £25,396; the population in 1911 was 3,820, of which 3,562 are included in the royal burgh of Perth. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 4,076. The total population included 71 officials and 121 inmates of Murray's Royal Mental Hospital for private patients only and 30 officials and 76 inmates in Hillside Home and Sanatorium.

LECROPT is now incorporated for civil purposes with Dunblane. It was originally partly in Perthshire and partly in Stirlingshire; this latter portion containing a part of the village of Bridge of Allan, the other part of which was in Logie parish (Stirlingshire). By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 and 127, the part of Bridge of Allan then in Lecropt was transferred into Logie parish, while the landward portion of Lecropt (Stirlingshire), then left, was transferred to this county, thus placing the parish of Lecropt wholly in Perthshire, except for ecclesiastical purposes. The parish, embracing all the original parish, retains its old boundaries. The parish church, a building in the Gothic style, lies about half a mile south-west of Bridge of Allan, overlooking the carse. Brig.-Gen. Archibald Stirling D.L. and the Earl of Moray are the principal landowners. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 662, of which 447 were in Stirlingshire.

LOGIERAIT is a parish in the northern part of the county and in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination. The village is about half a mile from Ballinluig station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 8 miles north-north-west from Dunkeld, and the like distance north-east from Aberfeldy. The principal part of the parish lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the Tay and the Tummel, extending along the banks of each for 7 miles. An iron bridge was erected in 1888 at a cost of £2,800, in place of the chain boat, previously the only means of communication between the two sides of the river. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Dull parish, and also of Dunkeld, Dowally, Moulin and Weem, were added to Logierait parish, and parts of Kenmore parish added to Dull, Weem, Moulin and Fortingal. Here is an Established church, two Roman Catholic churches and a Baptist chapel. The parish is noted for the distillation of whisky. Here is a monument erected to the late Duke of Atholl (d. 16 Jan. 1864), by the gentlemen of the county and his tenantry. LONGFORGAN is a parish in the Perth small debt court district, varying from one to 4 miles in breadth, and is 9 in length; it forms the eastern boundary of the carse of Gowrie, and extends along the Tay on its southern extremity for more than 4 miles. The village stands on a ridge at an elevation of about 130 feet above the Tay, of which, with the whole of the intermediate country to the east, and particularly to the south and south-west, it commands an uninterrupted prospect, and is 6 miles south-west from Dundee, with a station one mile south on the Dundee and Perth section of the Caledonian railway. Near here, situated in a dell, are the ruins of a chapel, said to have been erected by Malcolm IV. in 1164, for a community of Cistercian monks. A fair is held every third Saturday in June (o. s.). There is an Established church. Castle Huntly, now (1921) unoccupied, was erected in 1452, by Andrew, 1st Lord Gray, of Fowlis, and is said to have been named by Patrick, the 3rd lord, after his wife, a daughter of the Earl of Huntly, who had large possessions in the carse. The castle walls are 10 feet thick, and the mansion includes a round tower, 116 feet in height, and commanding extensive and beautiful prospects of the Fife coast, with the Ochills and other loftier mountains. Lord Kinnaird K.T., J. Martin White esq. Alfred Tosh esq. William Willie esq. William D. Graham esq. Charles H. Watson, David Peebles, Charles James G. Paterson esq. The Board of Agriculture for Scotland, Louis N. Trotter Stead esq. David Walker esq. and George W. and William G. Findlayson are the principal landowners. The soil of the parish varies in quality, but upon the whole is exceedingly productive. There is also an abundant supply of stone of good quality. Acreage of the parish, 11,250; rateable value, £17,035; population, 1911, 1,996.

MEIGLE, a parish in the district of Strathmore, is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village, the seat of a presbytery, is on the banks of the Isla, with a station on the Alyth branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 61 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north-by-east from Perth, 13½ north-north-west from Dundee, 5 north-east from Coupar-Angus, and 4 south from Alyth; the parish, 4½ miles in length and 2 in breadth, is fertile and well cultivated, and, besides the Isla, is watered by the Dean, which is the northern boundary of the district. The parish church, erected on the site of the old one (destroyed by fire in March, 1869), at a cost of about £2,500, was opened in July, 1870. In a small museum are kept some ancient monuments, which were removed from the churchyard, one of which tradition asserts to be the grave of Queen Vanora, the unfaithful wife of King Arthur, but the figures on it, said to have once delineated the history of Vanora, are now all but indistinguishable. There is also a United Free church. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret, built in 1852, is attached to that of St. Ninian, Alyth, and will seat 100 persons. A cattle auction is held occasionally. Belmont Castle is now (1921) in course of transformation into a convalescent home; the gardens and fine plantations render it a most delightful residence. In one of the enclosures a tumulus is pointed out, where, it is said, Macbeth was deprived of his usurped power and his life in his fatal encounter with Macduff. A number of stones and monuments, supposed to be of Pictish origin, are also to be seen in the vicinity. Kinloch is the seat of Charles W. Walker esq. and Cardean, of Mrs. Cox. Sir James Carmichael K.B.E., J.P. and Thomas Wedderspoon esq. are the principal landowners. About a mile north-east of the village, at the junction of the Isla and the Dean, are the remains of a Roman camp, called Cardean, or Caerdean, and noticed by General Roy in his work on the Roman antiquities of Scotland. The Kinloch Arms is a good hotel, and affords free fishing on the Isla and part of the Dean. Area of the civil parish, 3,984 acres; rateable value, £10,278; population in 1911, 810 civil and 856 ecclesiastical.

MEIKLEOUR is a village, in the civil parish of Caputh, poor law combination of Logierait, and small debt court district of Perth, and is 2 miles north from Cargill station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, 4 south from Blairgowrie and 11½ north-east from Perth. The surrounding country is very beautiful, and the far-famed Beech Hedge, the chief attraction of this village, comprises trees reaching an average of 90 feet in height; the total length of the hedge being estimated at 580 yards. It is believed to have been planted in 1746, one year after the battle of Culloden. In a field close to the road stands a pillar, and near to the top is a hole for receiving a beam whereon to suspend scales for weighing wool &c. the "tron or trone" of former days; it likewise has fixed to it the still existing jougs in which offenders, civil and ecclesiastical, did penance for their offences. The original "trone" was destroyed by a fire which the zealous Liberals in the village and neighbourhood kindled in 1832 to destroy Toryism in the keenly contested election of that year; but it was shortly afterwards replaced. In the middle of the village stands the market cross, surrounded by an iron railing, and bearing the date 1698. Lady Violet Astor, in 1919, presented a public hall to the village. There is also a bowling green.

MEIKLE TROCHRY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

METHVEN is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Perth, and is bounded on the north by the river Almond. The village is on the high road from Perth to Crieff, and is the terminus of short line from Methven Junction station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, 6 miles west from Perth and 11 north-east from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Methven, and a part of Methven, with a population of 53, added to Auchtergaven. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Here is the grave of Bessie Bell and Mary Gray, whose beauty and seclusion from the world at the time of the plague, 1666, from which they ultimately died, have been recorded in Scottish song. About a mile from the village is Methven Castle, the property of Col. David Murray Smythe D.L., J.P. the principal landowner; the castle is distinguished in Scottish history as the place where King Robert was defeated by the English army, under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. Trinity College, Glenalmond, on the banks of the Almond, is 10 miles north-west from Perth and 4 north-west from the Methven railway station; it was projected in 1841, and opened in 1847, for the double purpose of supplying a proper collegiate training to candidates for holy orders in the Scottish Episcopal church, and of establishing in Scotland a public school after the general model of those in England, but the theological department has long since been removed to Edinburgh. The site on which the College stands was presented by the late George Patton esq. (Lord Glenalmond) of the Cairnies; the funds for the buildings were raised by general subscription. The chapel, a building in the Decorated Gothic style, is 136 feet long by 52 wide, with a height of 70 feet, and was erected by the late Right Rev. C. Wordsworth, Bishop of St. Andrews, at a cost of over £8,000. There are now (1921) 130 boys, all boarders. Council consists of sixteen members, namely, the seven Scotch bishops, two deans and seven laymen; the resident teaching staff consists of a warden, thirteen assistant masters and a medical officer: there is also an engineering side, with a well equipped workshop. The area is 10,848 acres; rateable value, £14,514; population, 1901, 1,699 parish; village, 659, and in 1911, parish 1,847, ward 1,509; ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 1,843.

ALMOND BANK is a village in Methven parish and small debt court district of Perth, about 4 miles north-west from Perth, and a station on the Perth, Methven and Crieff line of the Caledonian railway.

MONTEITH, see PORT OF MENTEITH.

MONZIE parish has been absorbed in the newly-constituted parish of Logiealmond.

MONZIEVAIRD and STROWAN form a united civil parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and Crieff small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, parts of the parishes of Crieff, Fowlis Wester and Monzie were transferred to Monzievaird and Strowan, and parts of Monzievaird and Strowan to Comrie and Muthill.

Monzievaird is 3 miles north-west from Crieff, its nearest railway station, on the Caledonian line, and has an Established church. The river Earn passes through the district from west to east; and in the neighbourhood of this stream the country is beautiful and well planted and inclosed. There are several small lakes in the parish, among which is the lake of Monzievaird, situated at the bottom of a wood in the pleasure grounds of Ochtertyre, and well stocked with pike, perch and eels. On the bank of the lake a fine repeating echo is produced. Ben Chonzie mountain, 3,048 feet high, is in this parish. Towards the close of the 15th century, the clan Drummond, in pursuit of the Murrays, found they had taken refuge along with their wives and children in the old parish church, to which the Drummonds set fire, when every soul was burned save one, who escaped by leaping out of a window. Ochtertyre, the property of Sir William Keith Murray bart. is the residence of D. Anderson, esq.; Lawers is the property of Capt. N. F. W. Rockey; Strowan, the property of Major Carolus Home Graham-Stirling D.L., J.P. is the residence of Mrs. H. Hogarth and Clathick House is at present (1921) unoccupied. Sir William Keith Murray bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 31,718; assessable rental, £11,31: population of the civil parish in 1911, 508, and in the ecclesiastical, 538.

MOULIN is a large parish in the Highlands, extending towards the Forest of Atholl, bounded on the north-east by the parish of Kirkmichael, on the south-east by Logierait, on the south-west by Dull, and on the west and north-west by Blair-Atholl. It is intersected by the Briarachan stream and by the River Tummel and the Fernate stream. The several lochs are well stocked with trout. The greater part of the parish is mountainous, but the vales of the streams are exceedingly beautiful. The village, which is very small, is half a mile north from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair-Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 8 south from Blair-Atholl, and 30 north from Perth. Here is an Established church, and at Straloch is a Royal Bounty Mission church. Near to the village stand the ruins of the old castle of Moulin. The Moulin hotel is an excellent hostelry. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of Blair-Atholl parish, without population, and of Logierait, with a population of 63, have been added to this parish, and a part of Moulin parish, with a population of 9, added to Blair-Atholl. The parish church, erected in 1832, was destroyed by fire in 1872, but rebuilt in the same style. In this parish is the pass of Killiecrankie, noted for the battle fought there on the 17th of July, 1689, between King William's army, commanded by General Mackay, and a body of Highlanders under Viscount Dundee, where, after defeating the royal troops, the gallant Claverhouse met with his death. Faskally is the residence of Major Frederic C. Foster D.L., J.P.; Baledmund, of Lt. Edmund J. Fergusson R.N.; Balna Keilly, of Major Alexander B. Stewart J.P. and Kindrogan, of Frank Balfour esq. The principal landowners are the Duke of Atholl K.T., C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O. Major Frederic C. Foster, Charles A. J. Butter esq. J. D. Brunton esq. A. C. Scott esq. Major Alexander B. Stewart J.P. and A. C. Sandeman esq. The parish of Moulin has an acreage of 11,862; rateable value, £29,565; the population in 1911 was 2,670; ecclesiastical parish, 2,518.

MUCKHART is a village and parish in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 2 miles north-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Glasgow and Perth main line of the North British Railway, 11 north-east from Alloa, and 18 south-east from Crieff. It is triangular in shape, about 5 miles in length from east to west, its greatest breadth from north to south being about 2½ miles. The river Devon forms its principal boundary, separating it from Fossoway on the south and east, while on the north and west two small streams respectively divide it from Glendevon and Dollar, there being altogether 12 bridges of various kinds commanding every exit from the parish. A branch of the Ochil Hills runs east and west along the northern boundary of the parish, terminating on the east by a conical-shaped hill called "Sea-mab," 1,442 feet above sea level. The Devon in this neighbourhood creates a number of interesting waterfalls, amongst which are the falls of Rumbling Bridge, Devil's Mill and Caldron Linn. The water passes through fissures in the rocks, which in many places present the appearance of having been rent asunder. When viewed from the parapet of the Rumbling Bridge, 120 feet above the level of the river and over 500 feet above the sea level, the scenery beneath, on both sides, is very striking, and since the opening of the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway, for which there is a station at Rumbling Bridge, this locality has become much frequented. In 1645, every house in Muckhart parish, including the church, was burnt by the Marquess of Montrose, when he sacked and destroyed Castle Campbell, at that time belonging to the Earl of Argyll. Besides the parish church, situated in the small village of POOL, there is also a United Free church. Miss Christie, Alexander Price Haig esq. D.L., J.P. John James Moubray esq. J.P. John E. Kerr esq. J.P. and Major John Izat C.I.E. are the principal landowners. The soil of Muckhart is in general light and gravelly, but in some parts it is more retentive. The area is 4,932 acres; the rateable value, £5,881; population in 1911, 535.

MURTHLY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MUTHILL is an extensive parish and village in Upper Strathearn poor combination and in the small debt court district of Crieff, on the borders of the Highland district, and on the right bank of the Earn. The village is on the great military road from Dunblane to Inverness by Tummel Bridge, 19 miles north from Stirling, 16 south-west from Perth and 3 south from Crieff, with a station on the Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway, one and a half miles east from the village. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, parts of Crieff, Monzievaird and Strowan parishes were transferred to Muthill, and a part of Muthill parish added to Comrie. In the parish are the ruins of a church, said to have been built in 1419, but the tower appears to be of earlier date. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. James, built in 1836, will seat 150 persons; the Rev. A. Beith Caird M.A. has been rector since 1920. There is a nine-hole golf course.

Culdees, finely seated on a rock at the head of the vale of Strathearn, is the seat of Robert Thomas Napier Speir esq. D.L., J.P. Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the family of Drummond, Earls of Perth, is now the residence of the Earl of Ancaster, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Muthill parish has an area of 26,181 acres; rateable value, £13,803: population in 1911, 1,269 in the civil, and 1,431 in the ecclesiastical parish, which comprises part of Crieff civil parish.

PERTH (Gadh. "barr-tatha," the height on the Tay) is an ancient city, royal burgh, the seat of a synod, conjointly with Stirling, and of a presbytery, and the capital of the county to which it gives its name; it is also a civil parish and head of a poor combination and is on the river Tay, about 10 miles from the Firth, 46 north from Edinburgh, 62 north-east from Glasgow, 22 south-west from Dundee, 15 south from Dunkeld, and 16 south from Blairgowrie. Perth is a railway centre, with a station used jointly by the Caledonian, North British and Highland railways; the Perth and Dundee line crosses the Tay by a bridge and a viaduct over Moncreiffe Island; the Highland railway places Perth in communication with Inverness and the extreme north. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 70, a portion of the parish of Tibbermore has been transferred to Perth, and a part of Perth parish added to Tibbermore. In 1909 the municipal boundaries were extended by the inclusion of several parts of the parishes of Tibbermore, Scone and Kinnoull. The city is situated at the opening of an extensive plain called Strathmore, nearly surrounded by picturesque hills, with the Grampians in the distance; it is bounded on the north and south by two fine meadows, known as the North and South Inches, and used as public recreation grounds, the former covering 100, and the latter 72 acres; both are ornamented with noble trees, and watered by the Tay, which occasionally overflows them. Traces of a fortification, called Cromwell's Fort, at one time visible on the South Inch, have now been built over. The approach to Perth by the Edinburgh road is very picturesque, and the descent to the South Inch terminates in a fine avenue of trees, extending to the town. The city itself is large and well built and the principal streets are long and well paved. The river Tay, on which the city stands, is crossed by a fine bridge, constructed from the designs of John Smeaton F.R.S. the eminent engineer. It was originally narrow, admitting of a footpath on one side only, but in 1871 was widened at a cost of over £2,000, by the addition of castiron footways, with Caithness pavement and balustrades. A new bridge was constructed in 1899, at a cost of over £30,000 from designs by Messrs. Blyth and Westland C.E. Edinburgh. Vessels of 200 tons burthen, owing to skilful dredging, can deliver and receive cargoes at the harbour; and two steamers pass irequently between Perth and Dundee. Fishing boats and their implements are marked with the letters "P. E. H."

Perth has long been noted for its dye works; the principal cleaning and dyeing works being Pullars', in Kinnoull street; it is also famous for the manufacture of inks and gauge glasses, of linen and jute, carpets &c.; brewing, iron founding, rope and sail making are also pursued, and the coal, corn and timber trades employ in the aggregate a large number of hands. Perth is also the centre of the live stock trade in Scotland.

The city is lighted both by gas and electricity, and supplied with water from the Tay, which is purified by natural filtering beds constructed in the gravel of the river, adjacent to the city, and producing, at all seasons, an unlimited quantity of pure, soft and limpid water, which runs by gravitation to the Water Works at the east end of Marshall place, in the extreme south-eastern angle of the city, whence it is pumped into a number of reservoirs in the vicinity. By the "Perth Water Act," now in full operation, the present system has been extended to all parts of the city and suburbs. Both the gas, water and electricity undertakings are the property of the Corporation, who in 1903 also acquired the tramway system between Perth and Scone, now worked by electric power.

Perth was a burgh as early as 1106, but in 1210 was fortified, and constituted a royal burgh, with confirmation of all its former privileges, by William the Lion. Until 1848 it ranked as the capital of Scotland, although Edinburgh became the seat of government in 1437; in 1617 it was visited by James VI. (James I. of England), who accepted the office of provost of the city. The city is now divided into six wards, and is governed by a lord provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen councillors. The council thus consists of twenty-six members, all of whom, with the exception of the dean of guild, are, since the passing of the "Reform Act of 1867," elected by household suffrage. The dean of guild is a member of council ex-officio, and is chosen by the Guildry Incorporation; the lord provost and magistrates are elected by the councillors from amongst themselves. The council meets on the second Monday in every month; a sheriff court is held every Tuesday and Friday during session, and two courts at least in each vacation. The magistrates have also the power of inflicting summary punishment for petty offences.

Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Perth is included in the Perth and Kinross division for parliamentary purposes.

The Episcopal Cathedral of St. Ninian, in Atholl street, built in 1850, from designs by the late M. W. Butterfield, is a large and lofty structure in the Early Geometric style, and consists of choir with vestries, transepts, clerestoried nave of four bays, with aisles, erected in 1890, a western tower and attached to it on the north side a spacious porch with gabled parvise: above the roof of the crossing rises an open bellcote with spirelet. In 1901 a large rectangular chapter house was erected on the south side of the cathedral, designed by the late J. L. Pearson esq. R.A. completed by his son F. L. Pearson esq. as a memorial to the Rt. Rev. Charles Wordsworth D.D., D.C.L. bishop 1853-93, and connected by cloisters with the cathedral. At the same time the choir was lengthened 24 feet, and aisles added to it, an organ chamber and vestries built, new Episcopal throne, and canons' and choir stalls erected, and a new pulpit of stone provided, highly enriched with carvings illustrating the history of the Scottish church: the total cost was about £13,000. In 1908-9 a lady chapel was erected by Atholl Macgregor esq. in memory of his wife; it consists of a nave with an octagonal apse; on the north side is a tomb in memory of Bishop Wilkinson and bearing a bronze figure in a kneeling posture. In 1909-10 the west tower, which had not been completed owing to unsafe foundations, was taken down and the roof was carried through to the west end of the cathedral and terminated by a gable flanked by north and south turrets. Turrets have also been placed to the north and south of the east gable. The cathedral contains some good stained glass by Buillisson and Grylls; there is a brass to the memory of the officers and men of the Black Watch who lost their lives in the war in South Africa. The cathedral is the head of the united diocese of St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane, formed in 1837, but accounts of these as separate dioceses, together with descriptions of their cathedral churches will be found under the respective headings.

St. John's Episcopal church, Princes street, is an edifice in the Early English style, and affords about 500 sittings. The Rev. George Ross Vallings M.A., D.S.O. of Worcester College, Oxford, has been rector since 1910.

The church of St. John the Baptist, originally cruciform, and called the Kirk of the Holy Cross of St. Johnstoun, partly erected by David I. in 1126 and repaired by King Robert the Bruce in 1324, is an edifice of stone, consisting of choir, nave, transepts, and a tower with singularly designed spire: the belfry contains the finest and oldest bells now in use in Scotland. Originally the interior formed a single church, but it is now divided by screens so as to accommodate three separate congregations: the various divisions being known as the East, Middle and West churches; the choir, or East church, built in 1400, was re-opened in June, 1893, after restoration and the removal of the galleries: the transepts and part of the nave forming the Middle church, after being restored and renovated consequent on the fire which occurred about a year previous, were re-opened on the 15th March, 1896: the nave three bays of which have been restored, forms the west church. There are regimental monuments and colours attached to the walls, and in the north transept is the burial vault used since the 14th century by an old Perthshire family, the Mercers, who bequeathed the two parks known as the Inches to the town. Connected with the church is a cup received by Queen Mary from the Pope and gifted by her to the Church of Perth, described as historically the most interesting piece of church plate in Scotland. Here John Knox preached in 1559, and Ebenezer Erskine in 1732.

St. Paul's church, at the end of High street, in South Methven street, is a modern building of stone, with a steeple.

St. Leonard's church, in King street, was erected in 1835; the expense being defrayed by joint-stock shares and private subscriptions.

St. Stephen's church, Wilson street, Craigie, was erected in 1896, and is a building of red sandstone. A new session-house and vestry was added in 1908.

The United Free church has numerous places of worship. There is a Baptist chapel in Tay street, Wesleyan Methodist in Scott street, and a Roman Catholic chapel in Melville street.

The Roman Catholic church of St. Mary, Kinnoull hill, has attached a residence of the Redemptorist Fathers, erected from designs by the late Mr. Heiton, of Perth.

The Perth Academy and Sharp's Institution were combined to form one school in 1915. The academy buildings consist of four blocks. The original block and houses to north and south of it, all fronting Rose terrace, are occupied by the rector's room, lady superintendent's room, teachers' room, music rooms, and class-rooms for the teaching of English, classics, mathematics, science, modern languages and commercial subjects. The building fronting Barossa street contains the chemical and physical laboratories, art class-rooms, workshops for manual instruction in wood, iron &c. cookery rooms and gymnasium. Sharp's Institution consists of the original building, and an addition at the back with lateral extensions north and south of the main building. The addition includes the physical laboratory, workshop for manual instruction in wood, iron &c. general class-rooms and gymnasium. The lower floor of the main building provides for the whole of the junior school; the middle floor contains a class-room, music and sewing rooms, cloak room and teachers' rooms; the upper floor contains the chemical laboratory, lecture room, art class-rooms, modelling room &c. There are numerous scholarships, and accommodation for 900 boys and girls.

The Municipal buildings, at the east end of High street, erected in 1881, on the site of the old Town hall, at a cost of £13,000, are in the Tudor style, from designs by the late Mr. Heiton, architect, of Perth, and have a frontage to the river. The council chamber, which occupied the principal portion of the building and was adorned with stained glass illustrative of personages in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Fair Maid of Perth," was completely destroyed by fire in January, 1895, together with its valuable contents, as well as a portion of the public offices, but was restored in 1896 from the original plans by Mr. Heiton. The buildings also contain the offices of the city clerk, chamberlain, registrar, assessor, chief constable, burgh surveyor, sanitary inspector and gas offices. The burgh court room, which has its principal entrance from Tay street, is on the first floor above the police office, and communicates therewith.

The County Buildings, in Tay street, on the bank of the Tay, were erected from the designs of Mr. Stuart, architect, and display, in the centre, an elegant portico with twelve massive fluted columns, supporting a pediment: the county hall, a fine room, 68 feet by 40, occupies the south wing; the centre contains a justiciary hall of semi-circular form, with a spacious gallery. The remainder of the building on the same floor includes the sheriff court and room, sheriff clerk's office, and an arched fire-proof room where the records of the town are deposited; above is a spacious ball room and a card room &c. In 1866 an additional building was erected in South street.

The City Hall, in King Edward street, was erected in 1909-11 at a cost of over £30,000. The building comprises a large hall capable of seating 2,000 persons and a small hall capable of seating 500 persons. In the open space opposite the front of the hall, stands the King Edward Memorial, erected in 1913. The memorial is a replica of the Old Market Cross which was demolished in 1765.

The Marshall Memorial, at the end of George street and near the bridge, is a circular structure in the Classic style, with a portico of the Ionic order and a dome, and was begun in 1822, by private subscription, as a memorial to the late Thomas Hay Marshall esq. formerly lord provost. The interior contains the museum of the Perth Literary and Antiquarian Society, which has been handed over by the Society to the Town, and is now (1921) in process of being reorganized.

The Perthshire Natural History Museum has, exclusive of the museum halls, a large lecture room, library and laboratory. These form a single building between 200 and 300 feet in length, in the Scottish baronial style, from the designs of Messrs. J. and G. Young, architects, of Perth. In 1894 and 1895 a large addition was made to the museum, and in June 1902, it was presented by the Natural History Society to the city, and is now under the management of the Town Council. The museum embraces nearly complete collections representing the Fauna, Flora and Geology of Perthshire, as well as a small index of type collection of general natural history.

The Sandeman Public Library, Kinnoull street, was erected in 1896-8 by the Town Council, acting under the bequest of the late Archibald Sandeman, professor of Mathematics in Owens College, Manchester; the building, declared open by the Earl of Rosebery 22 Oct. 1898, is of red sandstone, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, from designs by Messrs. Campbell Douglas and Morrison, architects, of Glasgow. On the ground floor are the lending department, reading room (open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.), juvenile reading room and librarian's room. The reference department, ladies' room and committee room are on the first floor, and a museum and picture gallery occupy the second floor. The reference department is open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and the lending department from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. On the 31st Oct. 1920, the reference department contained 15,400 volumes and the lending department 17,820 volumes.

The Freemasons' Hall, in Parliament close, High street, built on the site of the old Parliament House, in 1818, is the property of the Royal Arch Lodge of Freemasons.

The Perth Boys' and Girls' Religious Society Hall, erected in 1881, at a cost of about £3,200, will hold 800 children, and contains, besides the hall, a director's room, two large class rooms, lady workers' room and offices.

The Poorhouse, an extensive pile of buildings, on the Glasgow road, was erected by the Perth Parochial Board, at a cost of £8,000.

The house of Simon Glover and the "Fair Maid of Perth" belongs to the Corporation, and is preserved as a relic of Old Perth. A portion of the old building still remains and contains a niche, which is believed to have contained an image of St. Bartholomew, the patron saint of the Glovers.

H.M. Prison for Scotland, near the South Inch, built by Government in 1812, for the reception of prisoners of war, was wholly rebuilt and remodelled in 1842, and is now occupied as a prison for male and female prisoners undergoing short sentences, more extensive buildings having been erected for the detention of criminal lunatics.

The New County and City of Perth Royal Infirmary, in Tullylumb terrace, on the slope of a hill to the west of the city, was opened by T.M. King George V. and Queen Mary in July, 1914. The buildings cover a large area, and are built on the pavilion plan. The total cost was about £50,000. During 1920 there were 1,661 house patients and 2,853 out-patients; 485 patients received electrical treatment. The nurses' home is in the centre block and provides for 32 nurses. There is a separate children's block.

King James the Sixth's Hospital was founded by King James VI. in 1569, and charters were granted by that monarch in 1569 and 1587, and confirmed by Acts of Parliament in 1587 and 1592, "to provide by all honest ways and means an hospital for the poor, maimed, distressed persons, orphans, and fatherless bairns within our burgh of Perth," and for the endowment of which he gave, "all the lands, biggins, tenements, kirks, orchards &c. which pertained to the chaplainries, altarages and prebendaries founded in whatever kirk, chapel or college within the liberties and privileges of the said burgh of Perth; all the lands &c. which pertained to the Blackfriars, Greyfriars and Carmelite monks at the Reformation—the profits of the same to be applied, in all time coming, to the hospital and sustenance of the poor." The pensioners now live out, and receive an equivalent of £6 and £12 a year; the hospital building is now for the most part converted into dwelling houses for the working classes.

Murray's Royal Mental Hospital, on Kinnoull hill, erected from a bequest of Mr. James Murray, a native of Perth, and opened in 1827, is a building of the Grecian-Doric order, intended for private insane patients only: two wings have been added for acute cases, and two villas erected: attached are extensive pleasure grounds, surrounded by the fields of the Home farm and several villas under the same management. Pitcullen House and Seven Gables, Elie, have been acquired as Convalescent Homes. The Mental Hospital is managed by a body of directors, who are incorporated.

The Perth and Perthside Hospital for Incurables situated on the Dundee road, usually contains from 40 to 60 patients. In connection with the hospital is a sanatorium, situated on the slope of Kinnoull hill, for the treatment of pulmonary consumption on the open air system, and having 22 beds.

A statue of H.R.H. the late Prince Consort, executed by Mr. Brodie, sculptor, of Edinburgh, was erected in 1864 on the North Inch and inaugurated by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, on the 30th of August of that year, on which occasion the late Sir David Ross, then lord provost, was knighted.

On the North Inch is also a granite obelisk, erected in 1895 by the County and City of Perth and officers, past and present, to commemorate the deeds of the 90th Light Infantry (Perthshire Volunteers), originally raised in May, 1794, by Thomas Graham, of Balgowan, who was promoted to the rank of General in 1809 for his services in Italy, Spain and Holland, made a G.C.B. in 1812, and created Baron Lynedoch in 1814. This regiment, in July, 1881, was constituted the second batt. Cameronians.

A band stand has been erected on the North Inch at the cost of the late Mr. J. F. Pullar, of Rosebank; on the South Inch is a statue of Sir Walter Scott.

The theatre and opera house, High street, erected from plans by Mr. William Alexander, architect, of Dundee, was opened in Sept. 1900, and will hold an audience of 1,300.

There are public swimming baths in Dunkeld road, with a bowling green attached.

The Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited have each two branches in the city, and there are also branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, as well as a savings bank with a branch at County place.

The Royal Perth Golfing Society includes in its roll of members a great many of the nobility and gentry of the locality. The members play on the North Inch. The members of King James VI. Golf Club play on the Moncreiffe Island, and the members of the Craigie Hill Golf Club on Craigie Hill. There are three bowling clubs, each having its own green, the Balhousie, the Kinnoull and the West End.

The weekly market day is Friday. The fairs, since the year 1822, have been altered by the magistrates and town council on account of the general inconvenience resulting from the dates formerly appointed falling on the same days, or at the same time, with the fairs of Falkirk and other places; they are now, therefore, held on the first Friday in March, April, July and September, on the third Friday in October, the second Friday in December, and a sheep and wool fair the first Tuesday after Inverness wool fair, and a horse market takes place on the first Friday in May. There are now two great cattle and sheep markets in Perth, sales taking place on Monday and Friday.

Three newspapers are published here, viz.: the "Perthshire Advertiser" (Independent), established in 1829, and published on Wednesday and Saturday; the "Perthshire Constitutional and Journal," established in 1832, published on Monday and Wednesday, and the "Perthshire Courier," established in 1809, and Liberal in politics, published on Tuesday.

PITLOCHRY is a thriving village in the parish of Moulin, Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district, and has a station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway; it is 13 miles northwest from Dunkeld and 28 north from Perth, on the banks of the Tummel, and is surrounded by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery to be found in the Highlands of Perthshire; it is also largely resorted to by tourists and anglers for the fishing in the river and Loch Tummel. Spout Dhu, or the black waterfall, Ben-y-Vrackie, one of the Grampians, the falls of Tummel and the Pass of Killiecrankie are all in the immediate neighbourhood. The Established church is a structure in the Gothic style, erected in 1884, on an elevated site, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. There is also a United Free church. Holy Trinity Episcopal church, built in 1858, and enlarged in 1891, is an edifice in the Gothic style, about half a mile east of the village; the Rev. Herbert McNaught M.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1920. There is also a Baptist chapel. The Barbour Institute is a very fine building erected in 1895, by the Barbour family, in memory of the late R. W. Barbour. There is a hydropathic establishment. Fairs are held annually on the Saturday before Amulree, in May; on the Friday after Falkirk tryst, in August (for lambs), and on the third Wednesday in October (old style). Whisky is extensively distilled in this place and neighbourhood. There are several good hotels, and branches of the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a branch of the Perth Savings Bank. Population in 1911, 1,714.

PORT OF MENTEITH is a parish in the ancient district of Monteith, in Dumbarton poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district, and is bounded on the south by the river Forth, which separates this county from Stirlingshire. The Goodie water, a tributary of the Forth, rises in the Lake of Menteith and flows through the eastern portion of the parish. The church stands on the high road from Dunblane to Dumbarton, 4 miles north from the Port of Menteith station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 4½ north-east from Gartmore station and about the same distance from Aberfoyle terminal station, both on a branch from Buchlyvie on the same section, and 15 north-west from Stirling. The Lake of Menteith is a beautiful sheet of water near the centre of the district, adjoining the church and manse. It is about 9 miles in circumference, and contains the small island of Inchmaholme, where stand the fine remains of an Augustinian priory, or monastery, founded in 1238 by Walter (Comyn), Earl of Menteith, and dedicated to St. Colmoc: the ruins include a considerable portion of the church, 151 feet in length, and the cloisters: on the north side of the nave are three pointed arches, two of which opened to a destroyed aisle or chapel, and the other to a north-west tower: the east window has five tall lancets, now blocked: the west doorway exhibits good mouldings, and has two blank arches on each side: part of the structure has been for ages the place of sepulture of many noble and ancient families. These ruins are sequestered in overhanging woods of considerable age and growth, and some of the trees are said to be upwards of three centuries old. In this vicinity, on a gentle eminence, are the remains of what is still known as "Queen Mary's Bower," where, after the disastrous battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, the young princess found a safe asylum till her departure for France. On a smaller islet, called Tala, a little distance from Inchmaholme, stand the remains of the principal residence of the Earls of Menteith. Dog Island, another islet, is the place where the Grahams had their kennels. The Established church here contains a very fine peal of 8 bells, presented by the Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard, of Rednock. The Lake Hotel adjoins the loch. Sir Henry David Erskine K.C.V.O., D.L., J.P. the Duke of Montrose K.T. Lt.-Col. Thomas Winter Sheppard Graham, Sir Charles William Cayzer bart. and George Crabbie esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 22,238; rateable value, £13,820; population 1911, 1,035 civil, and 485 ecclesiastical parish.

GARTMORE is a village in this parish, but is given under a separate heading.

RATTRAY—NEW and OLD form a police burgh and parish, adjoining Blairgowrie, its nearest railway station on a branch of the Caledonian railway, and approached by a bridge of four arches which spans the river Ericht. The surface is hilly and the land on the banks of the river arable and fertile, while the higher grounds are mostly suitable for pasture. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55), boundary order 72, a portion of Rattray parish, consisting only of the Bleaton estate, and having a population of 20, has been transferred to Kirkmichael. The burgh is in the poor combination of Perth and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie and is governed by a Town Council consisting of a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Wesleyan chapel. On the banks of the river Ericht are flax and jute mills. The Strathmore Hospital for Infectious Diseases, built in 1903, provides for 30 patients. Within the parish is Craighall, the seat of Col. Paul Robert Burn-Clerk Rattray C.B.E., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner; the mansion is said to have been visited by Scott in 1793, and was one of the prototypes of "Tullyveolan" in Waverley; it is a modern mansion occupying the summit of a perpendicular rock about 250 feet above the bed of the river and is open free on Tuesdays and Fridays. To the south-east of the burgh is an oblong mound called the Castlehill, on which are vestiges of the ancient castle of Rattray. From Hatton Hill, on a clear day, Perth can be seen. At the Hatton of Rattray was born Donald Cargill, a Scottish covenanting divine, executed in 1681. Acreage, 5,534; rateable value, £12,046; area of burgh, 306 acres; rateable value £7,429; population in 1911 in the civil parish, 2,160, of which, 1,730 were in the police burgh and 430 in the landward portion.

MARTINS is a parish and village 5½ miles north-east of Perth and 2½ south-west from Stanley station on the Cupar-Angus and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and in the small debt court district of Perth. The parish is of an irregular shape, being about 5 miles in length from east to west and 2½ broad. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order 71, a portion of Kinnoull parish (Balbeggie) was transferred to this parish. Here are Established and United Free churches. The soil is black moorland. Guildtown is a small village in this parish. At Cairnbeddie are the remains of a castle, once occupied by Macbeth, and from which, as tradition states, he removed to the celebrated hill of Dunsinane, where he fortified another castle. About a mile from his old residence, a place called "The Witch Stane" (where a remarkable stone still stands), is pointed out the spot where he was met by the witches ("Macbeth," Act I. Scene iii.). Norman Cox Methven esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,017 acres; rateable value, £6,700; population in 1911, 820 civil and 830 ecclesiastical parish.

SCONE is a parish and village, 2½ miles north-east from Perth; the parish, which extends 5 miles from east to west by 2½ broad, is in the small debt court district of Perth, the nearest railway station being in that city. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order No. 71, a part of Kinnoull, with a population of 46, has been transferred to Scone, and a part of Scone, containing a population of 80, transferred to Cargill and to Kinnoull, with 39 population. A little westward of the village is the site of the Royal Palace, founded here by Kenneth II. when he removed the seat of the Scottish monarchy from Dunstaffnage Castle about A.D. 850, and deposited here the Stone of Destiny, which subsequently rested in the abbey until its removal to Westminster, London, by Edward I.; the abbey, which stood close to the palace, was founded by Alexander I. 1114; John (Ruthven) 2nd Earl of Gowrie, who lost his life at Gowrie House, 5 August, 1600, for the alleged attempt to imprison King James VI. (known as the "Gowrie Conspiracy"), began the palace which preceded the present fabric on the site of the old palace of the Kings of Scotland, and it was completed in 1606 by Sir David Murray, of Gospertie, cup-bearer of the king, who received the grant of these estates, together with the titles of Baron Scone and Viscount Stormont, for the effective support he rendered to James VI. in the conspiracy above mentioned: it was in a church on the Mote Hill, hard by, that King Charles II. was crowned King of Scotland in 1651; the present mansion, which is mostly modern, occupies the same site overlooking the Tay, and contains a little of the old furniture, including some bedhangings embroidered by Queen Mary, now the seat of the 7th Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield D.L., J.P. who is also 12th Viscount Stormont and Baron Scone, and 10th Baron Balvaird in the Peerage of Scotland. Near the house stands the old market cross of Scone, surrounded by a wilderness of pleasure grounds, which have usurped the site of the ancient village; it has been aptly observed that "there are many instances of towns losing their market crosses, but this is the only cross which has lost its town." The Earl of Mansfield is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 6,953 acres; rateable value, £17,484; the population of the civil parish in 1901 was 1,943, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,407, and in 1911, 2,341 civil and 2,389 ecclesiastical, which comprises part of Kinnoull civil parish. A small portion of Perth city, without population in 1911, is in Scone parish.

NEW SCONE is a village in Scone civil parish.

TIBBERMORE (or Tibbermuir) is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Perth, bounded on the north by the river Almond, and is 1½ miles south from Almondbank station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, and about 5 west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Tibbermore parish was transferred to Perth, and part of the latter parish added to Tibbermore. In 1910 there was a further transfer of a small portion from this parish to Perth. Here is an Established church and a Church Hall. The parish contains two extensive bleach fields belonging to Messrs. Lumsden and Mackenzie. Tibbermore has given its name to a battle fought here, 1st Sept. 1644, between the Marquess of Montrose and the Covenanters, though the conflict occurred more within the parish of Aberdalgie; in this sanguinary engagement the covenanting forces were totally routed. The ancient castle of Huntingtower, formerly known as Ruthven castle, was once the seat of the Gowrie family, and the place where James VI. was confined by William Ruthven, Earl of Gowrie, and other conspirators, after the "Raid of Ruthven," in the year 1582; it is now preserved as an historic national relic. The area of the parish is 7,131 acres; rateable value, £25,787; population in 1901, 1,943, and in 1911, 2,794, of which 1,777 are included in the royal burgh of Perth. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,443.

RENFREWSHIRE

THIS county lies south of the Clyde, opposite to Dumbartonshire, and is divided from Argyllshire by the Firth of Clyde, being bounded on the south by Ayrshire and east by Lanarkshire; it extends from north-west to south-east about 30 miles, by 10 to 15 broad, and comprises 153,332 acres, or 239.6 square miles, of land and 2,794 of water; it is a large trading and manufacturing centre, and contained in 1901 a population of 268,890, and in 1911, 314,552, viz.:—males, 151,661; females, 162,891. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 54,510, and in 1911, inhabited, 64,378; uninhabited, 4,646, and building, 818.

Parts of the county have been transferred to Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, and part of Lanarkshire to Renfrewshire, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," and the boundaries were again altered in 1891 by Order of the Boundary Commissioners. The county in size is the twenty-eighth, and in population the fourth, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—When the Roman invaders advanced in A.D. 80 from the Solway Firth, this district was occupied by the "Damnii," a British tribe; the principal Roman station was established near where Paisley now stands, and called Vanduara, which was an outwork to the left flank of the great wall of Antonine. After the retreat of the Romans in 410, the Cumbrian Britons, with a capital city at Alclyde (Dumbarton), retained a hold on all the country west of the Lothians, which they held until 756, and in 1097 this part was regularly incorporated with the Scottish kingdom under Edgar. In the reign of David I. Walter, the son of Alan fled from Shropshire during the troublous conflicts of Maud and Stephen, and settled in the district, where David I. made him steward and gave him lands to support the dignity of his office. Besides these possessions, he subsequently acquired the whole district of Strathgryfe and the western half of Kyle, in Ayrshire, which hence was called Kyle Stewart. Such was the manner in which the first of the royal family of Stewart settled in Scotland. At this period the country in this quarter was in a semi-barbarous state, but Walter the Stewart introduced new and civilised usages. He settled many of his military followers on his lands, and by founding the abbey of Paisley introduced a body of instructed men, who taught the ancient people domestic arts and foreign manners. For several centuries this district formed a portion of Lanarkshire. In 1404 Robert III. created a principality, consisting of the barony of Renfrew and the whole of the Stewart's estates, with the earldom of Carrick and the barony of King's Kyle, all of which he granted, in a free regality, as a provision for his son James; and this principality continued, in after times, the appropriate appanage of the eldest sons of the Scottish monarchs. In consequence of these arrangements, the identity of the barony of Renfrew and the shire of Lanark was dissolved, and the former placed under the jurisdiction of a separate sheriff. Baron Renfrew is at the present time one of the titles of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. At Langside, in the extreme east of the county, was fought, 1568, the battle so fatal to Queen Mary, and ending in her flight to England.

Soil, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is very much diversified. In those parts of the high grounds which are not covered by heath and moss, a fine light soil on a gravelly substratum is generally found. In the portion composed of detached hills the surface is a thin earth, based on gravel; and in the level districts the plough or spade sinks through a deep, rich brown loam. More than one half of the shire, comprehending the west and south-east portions, is hilly, and devoted to pasture. The cultivated districts comprise the north, the north-east and the centre of the county, and consist partly of low elevations and partly of a level tract of rich loam between Paisley and the river Clyde. The hilly part varies in elevation from 500 to 1,250 feet; Misty Law, the hill of greatest altitude in the shire, is 1,663 feet high. Owing to the great demand in this county for dairy produce, and that also of the garden and the fold (arising from the vicinity of large and populous towns), nearly one half of the land in the shire is kept under grass. Nevertheless the system of agriculture is of the most advanced kind, the crops in general being excellent, and comprising wheat, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes, of which latter great quantities are grown for Glasgow and the markets of other large towns.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," were:—Oats, 12,331 acres; wheat, 2,073; barley (including bere), 80; beans (to be harvested as corn), 131; total corn crops, 14,627 acres; potatoes, 3,549 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,231; cabbage, 110; rape, 119; small fruit, 77; bare fallow, 69; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 9,973; not for hay, 6,375 acres. The total area of land is 151,431 acres, of which 40,697 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 47,160 acres permanent grass and 37,309 arable land.

The live stock in 1920 comprised:—2,235 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 19; unbroken horses, one year and above, 636; under one year, 231; other horses, 462; cows in milk, 11,110; in calf but not in milk, 2,686; heifers in calf, 1,774; other cattle, two years and above, 3,115; one year and under two, 3,666; under one year, 2,991; ewes kept for breeding, 13,878; other sheep, one year and above, 6,073; under one year, 13,167; sows kept for breeding, 262; other pigs, 1,724.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 93; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 118; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 105; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 125; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 131; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 164; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 179; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 133; above 300 acres, 12; total, 1,060.

The minerals are of considerable value, coal, limestone, ironstone and sandstone abounding in various parts of the county; the first-named being wrought principally in the neighbourhoods of Renfrew, Bishopton, Quarrelton, Nitshill, Neilston, and other places. The production of clay in 1919 was 21,215 tons; of coal, 77,367 tons, value £84,709; of iron ore, 47,620 tons; the total quantity of coal used in the manufacture of coke was 123,935 tons, the amount of coke obtained being 42,533 tons, entirely at gas works; other minerals raised in 1919 were gravel and sand, 8,643 tons; igneous rocks, 44,975 tons; limestone, 13,176 tons; sandstone, 4,274 tons. The total number of persons employed in 1919 in all mines and quarries was, underground 652, above ground 175.

In point of commercial and manufacturing importance this county is second only to that of Lanark, and with it unites in constituting the great manufacturing districts of Scotland. The goods produced are chiefly of cotton and silk, including, amongst various articles and fabrics, shawls of infinite diversity in texture and price. Whilst Paisley is the head quarters of the trade in these articles, the business of weaving is pursued, to a greater or less extent, in almost every town, village and hamlet. Another important branch is the manufacture of sewing cotton, which is carried on very extensively at Paisley. Besides those already mentioned, there are numerous bleach-fields, calico and shawl-printing works, dye-works, immense flax-spinning mills, linen thread, sailcloth, paper, starch and earthenware manufactories, large iron foundries, engineering, ship and boat building works, distilleries, breweries, sugar refineries, and many other branches of commerce of a varied and important character. The free export of manufactured goods is promoted by the different seaports on the Clyde, especially Greenock, by which also foreign produce is imported. The Forth and Clyde canal connects this county with many other shires. The fishing and general shipping trade is centred at Greenock, under which place particulars are given.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal streams are the White Cart, the Black Cart and the Gryffe, all of which ultimately unite and fall into the Clyde below Inchinnan Bridge—that is, about half-way down the river between Glasgow and Port Glasgow. The White Cart (which, by way of distinction, is generally denominated the Cart) rises at Eaglesham, in this county, and in the high grounds of East Kilbride, in Lanarkshire; and, passing Paisley in its course, joins the Gryffe at Inchinnan Bridge. The Black Cart issues from the loch of Castle Semple, in Lochwinnoch parish, and flowing northward falls in with the Gryffe at Walkinshaw. The Gryffe rises in the high grounds above Largs, and flows eastward until it meets the Black Cart; the Gryffe bestows the name of Strathgryfe upon the vale through which it flows. The lakes are Castle Semple Loch, Queenside Loch (in the parish of Lochwinnoch), two lochs in Neilston parish, and several smaller ones. The first-named (Castle Semple) is situate in the southern border of the county; its banks are beautifully wooded in some places, and it contains a small island, on which stand the ruins of a castle. The Glasgow and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway runs through the eastern portion of the county, via Barrhead, leaving it at Lugton, the Caledonian railway running a line over the same ground as far as Pollokshaws, and thence trending eastward to East Kilbride, while through the centre of the county, by Paisley, Johnstone and Beith to Ayr, runs the main line of the Glasgow and South Western, with a branch from Paisley northward to Renfrew, and one from Johnstone by Bridge of Weir to Greenock. The Caledonian railway runs a line through Paisley and along the south bank of the Clyde, to Port Glasgow and Greenock, with a branch via Upper Greenock to Wemyss Bay, and the line from Glasgow to Yoker cuts through the north-east angle of the county. The Caledonian Railway Company have a branch from Giffnock on the Bothwell and Pollokshaws section to Dunlop on the Kilmarnock branch, and one from near Giffnock to Houston on the Greenock branch.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Renfrewshire comprehends 13 entire and parts of 3 civil parishes and 45 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 7 others. It contains one royal burgh, Renfrew, three municipal burghs, Greenock, Paisley and Port Glasgow, and four police burghs, Barrhead, Gourock, Johnstone and Pollokshaws. Greenock and Paisley each send a representative, and the county, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," is separated into the East and West Divisions, and returns two members. The parliamentary constituency in 1919 was:—East Division, 27,880; West Division, 28,348.

ABBEY OF PAISLEY is a civil parish, a part of which is now included in the burgh of Paisley, the remainder comprising Elderslie and Levern, quoad sacra parishes.

BARRHEAD is a town, police burgh and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Neilston, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, with stations on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway, and on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 4 miles south-south-east from Paisley and 7 south-west from Glasgow. The town consists chiefly of one principal street, with several smaller ones diverging from it; it is lighted with gas by a limited company, and, together with the suburbs of Grahamston and Dunterlie, is the centre of a manufacturing and thickly populated neighbourhood. It was constituted a police burgh in 1894, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There are Established, Evangelical, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, a Wesleyan chapel, a Gospel hall and Salvation Army barracks. In the district are several large bleach fields, a number of extensive calico printing establishments and mills for cotton spinning and power loom weaving, besides collieries, engineering works and iron foundries. Here also are the sanitary engineering works of Messrs. Shanks and Co. Limited. There are branches in the town of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and also of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The trustees of Mrs. Glen, the trustees of Matthew Locke and the trustees of Miss M. Gilmour are the chief landowners. The area of the burgh is 529 acres; rateable value, £54,620; the population of the town in 1901 was 9,855 and in 1911, 11,387, viz.: first ward, 5,907; second ward, 1,817; third ward, 3,476. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 9,257 and in 1911, 10,598.

BEITH, a parish, formerly partly in this county, has, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," been entirely transferred to Ayrshire.

BISHOPTON, see ERSKINE.

BLACKHALL now forms part of the newly-constituted civil parish of Paisley.

BRIDGE OF WEIR is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed from the civil parish of Houston and Kilbarchan, 1 mile from Houston and 3 from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The old part of the village is situate in the parish of Houston, and the new part in the parish of Kilbarchan, through which flows the river Gryffe. The Established church here was erected at a cost of £3,000, and will seat 400 persons; there are also two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Mary is served by the diocesan staff. The Orphan Homes of Scotland, erected under the superintendence of the late William Quarrier, at a cost of about £250,000, are about a mile and a half from the village. In 1908 the homes were enlarged by the addition of a school, erected at a cost of about £8,000, and two new homes costing £6,300; in 1910 extensive alterations were made in the church, at a cost of about £5,000, and several new homes were erected. A sanatorium for the open air treatment of consumption was added in 1893, and has since been extended. The population in 1911 was 2,716, including 1,307 children and 144 officials and their families in the Orphan Homes of Scotland

BUSBY, see MEARNS.

CATHCART is a town and parish, the greater part of which is now incorporated with the city of Glasgow. The landward portion of the parish remains in the small debt court district of Paisley. Its original designation was Caer-Cart, i.e., the Castle on the river Cart; and the White Cart flows through the parish. Its boundaries were considerably modified by transfers made under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," by Boundary Orders 137 and 140, by which the town (and police burgh) of Crosshills, now included in Glasgow, and a large portion of suburban Glasgow, was transferred to Lanarkshire. By the "Glasgow Boundaries Act, 1912," which came into operation Nov. 5th, 1912, the Lanarkshire part of Cathcart civil parish, containing at the 1911 census a population of 12,801, was added to Glasgow City. The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 850 persons. The Couper Institute, a stone building erected in 1887, at a cost of about £6,000, was presented to the parish by the late Robert Couper, of Millholm. The field of Langside, in this parish, is remarkable for being the scene of the last fruitless effort of the unfortunate Mary to regain her crown, 13th May, 1568; on the defeat of her army by the troops of the Regent Murray, she took to flight, and crossing the Solway Firth, landed at Workington, in Cumberland, on the 16th of the same month. An eminence is still pointed out where the queen stood during the engagement. The old castle of Cathcart, a conspicuous ruin, occupies a commanding position, defended on two sides by the Cart, to which there is a deep and almost perpendicular descent: it belonged to the Lords of Cathcart, but has been dismantled for over a century. The area of the civil parish is 3,132 acres; rateable value, £425,844; population in 1901, 28,358, and in 1911, of the Renfrewshire portion, 15,205. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 26,777, of which 12,801 are in Glasgow City.

CLARKSTON is a rapidly increasing village in this parish, 2 miles south from Cathcart, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway and with a tram service from Glasgow.

DUNLOP is a parish, formerly partly in this county, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," it is now entirely included in the county of Ayr.

EAGLESHAM is a parish and modern village in Paisley small debt court district and poor law combination, 9 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, and 11 south-south-east from Paisley, about a mile to the north-west of the old castle of Polnoon and 2½ miles from Thornton Hall station on the Glasgow and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway. A tributary of the river White Cart runs through the village, that river forming the eastern boundary of the parish, which is bounded on the north-west by the Earn water. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. sections 44 to 50), boundary order 75, a part of East Kilbride parish in Renfrew county, without population, has been added to this parish. The old village was demolished in 1769, but was shortly afterwards rebuilt under the direction of Archibald, 11th Earl of Eglintoun, who also, in 1790, erected the church, an octagonal structure, with an elegant steeple, containing a good clock and a fine-toned bell. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The old castle of Polnoon was built with money received by Sir John Montgomerie from the Percy family, in ransom for Sir Henry Percy, better known as "Hotspur," who was taken prisoner by Sir John at the battle of Otterburn or Chevy Chase, 10 Aug. 1388, hence the name Polnoon, "Poind Money." Ballageich, one of the highest points in Renfrewshire, 1,084 feet high, is in this parish, and on the side of the Ballageich Hill is the spot called "The Queen's Seat," the tradition being that Mary Queen of Scots rested there on her flight after the battle of Langside, 13 May, 1568. Blackwood Hill, 1,000 feet in height, is in this parish, which also contains three small lochs. Eaglesham House is the seat of Capt. Angus Gilmour. A flower show is held in place of the old fair on the third Thursday of August. The barony of Eaglesham was in the Montgomerie family, Earls of Eglinton, from the year 1250, but is now the property of Lord Weir P.C. and Capt. Angus Gilmour, who is the chief landowner. The area of the parish is 15,794 acres; rateable value, £19,276; the population in 1911 was 1,138.

ELDERSLIE is a quoad sacra parish and village in the civil parish of Paisley, about half a mile distant from Johnstone, and 2½ miles west from Paisley, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. There are Established and United Free churches. Cotton spinning and the manufacturing of carpets is carried on here. The village has acquired considerable interest, from the fact of its having at one time been the residence of the renowned warrior Sir William Wallace, who in 1305, being betrayed by Sir John Monteith, fell into the hands of Edw. I. and was executed on Tower Hill, London, 23 Aug. 1305. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 4,002, and in Elderslie Ward of Paisley civil parish, 3,087.

INKERMAN is a mining village in Paisley parish, between 2 and 3 miles west from Paisley, which sprung into existence about the time of the Crimean war, and was named in commemoration of the battle of that name, fought Nov. 5, 1854. The population has decreased because of the decline in the mining industry.

GLENFIELD now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.

GLENPATRICK, see Elderslie.

GOUROCK is a seaport town and burgh of barony, in Inverkip parish and small debt court district of Greenock, 3 miles west from Greenock, 25 west from Glasgow and 69 west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and there is a tramway from Greenock, opened in July, 1873. The town is beautifully situated on the south side of a fine bay of the river Clyde, and is lighted with gas and supplied with water from special works. The haven affords excellent anchorage ground; the quay was constructed at a cost of about £5,000, and has a depth of nine feet at low water. The town, which is about two miles in length, has become a fashionable resort for families from Glasgow and other places during the summer. Gourock was incorporated as a burgh of barony by a charter from William and Mary, dated the 24th of April, 1694, the privileges of which are very extensive and include the right to hold a weekly market and two annual fairs. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six town councillors. The original chapel, built in 1773, was replaced in 1832 by a new church, with a handsome tower containing a clock. There are two United Free churches here and a Mission at Cardwell Bay; a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel; the Episcopal church of St. Bartholomew, built in 1857, and enlarged in 1910, will seat 320 persons. The Gamble Institute, opened in 1876, was built and endowed by the late Mrs. Gamble, of Ashburn, at a cost of about £8,000, and contains a public hall, billiard and reading rooms, a library, bath rooms &c. There are bowling, golf and yacht clubs. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. A Drill Hall, in Binnie street, was opened in May, 1899, by the late Duncan Darroch esq. Lt.-Col. Duncan Darroch is lord of the manor of Gourock and the principal landowner. The area of the burgh is 360 acres; rateable value, £76,404; the population in 1901 was 5,244, and in 1911, 7 442. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 6,356, and in 1911, 8,700.

GREENOCK

GREENOCK is a seaport and municipal and parliamentary borough, and the head of a poor combination, in the western division of the county, 22 miles west from Glasgow, 15 west from Paisley, 66 west from Edinburgh and 419 from London. Greenock is the terminus of a branch line from Glasgow via Paisley of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has also stations on the Greenock and Gourock section of the Caledonian line; from Upper Greenock on this branch is another branch to Wemyss Bay. The town stands on the south bank of the Clyde and comprehends three parishes, respectively called the West parish, the Mid parish and the East parish, all formed out of, and separated from, the original parish of Greenock. The first, which may be styled the mother parish of the three, includes the western part of the town and the greater proportion of the country district, and the east includes part of the town of Port Glasgow. Under the Improvement Act, considerable parts of the older districts of the town were cleared and rebuilt, at a cost of £150,000.

Lyle road, a wide thoroughfare leading up to the "Benians," a hill at the west end of the town, overlooking the river, was formed in 1878, at a cost of about £17,000. From the top of this road a very extensive view of the Clyde is afforded from Bowling to Dunoon and the Arran Hills.

The Esplanade, constructed at a cost of about £20,000, extends from the foot of Campbell street, in a noble sweep of about a mile and a quarter, along the shore of the Firth of Clyde, and is protected by a substantial sea wall, with palisades, provided with numerous landing places and seats, and ornamented with a fountain, erected as a memorial to John Galt, the novelist, who died at Greenock, 11 April, 1839.

The burgh is divided for municipal purposes into 8 wards, and the government is vested in a provost, 6 bailies, a town treasurer, a dean of guild and 16 councillors.

Greenock was constituted a parliamentary burgh in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

The town is lighted by electricity from works at Dellingburn, erected in 1907, and in Hunter place, erected in 1899, and with gas from works at Inchgreen, at the east end of the burgh; both undertakings are the property of the Corporation.

Greenock has, in addition to a domestic water supply, a supply for power to millsteads on two lines of falls or aqueducts. The Shaws Water Joint Stock Company was incorporated under an Act obtained in 1825, and constructed works which supplied the town and these millsteads by gravitation, the chief source being an artificial lake called Loch Thom, formed by the construction of a large dam across a valley through which the stream called the Shaws Water flowed. These works were acquired by the Corporation in 1866 and have been enlarged from time to time, until now the supply for domestic, trade and power purposes amounts to 260 gallons per day per head of the population.

Greenock, in the early part of the 18th century, was a small village, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, and without quay or harbour: it now, however, possesses several harbours, and in the Clyde, just off the port, is a large sandbank, extending to half a mile above Port Glasgow, the west end of which, known as the Tail of the Bank, affords the best anchorage ground in the Firth.

The various harbours and docks are as follows:—

1. The Mid harbour, the original harbour of the port, constructed during the 18th century, and about 8 acres in extent. 2. The East India harbour, formed early in the last century, and covering about 5 acres. 3. The Victoria harbour, extending over 6 acres, constructed at a cost of £120,000, and opened in 1850. This harbour is particularly well suited for vessels of large tonnage, and has a crane capable of lifting 100 tons, so that steamers of the largest class may have their engines fitted without touching the ground. 4. The Albert harbour, about 11 acres in extent, constructed at a cost, including quays, of £200,000, and opened in 1867. The Prince's pier, west of this harbour, about 1,600 feet long, was erected at a cost of £70,000, and opened in 1870, and has direct communication with the Glasgow and South Western railway. 5. The James Watt wet dock, opened in 1886; it was designed by Mr. Walter R. Kinipple C.E. of Greenock and Westminster, and is upwards of 2,000 feet in length, 32 feet in depth and 400 feet in width, and is capable of receiving the largest vessels afloat. There are large warehouses on the margin of the quays for grain and other merchandise, with elevators and hoists of the most improved description worked by hydraulic power. 6. The Tidal harbour, outside the wet dock, where timber vessels can be discharged, and coal and pig iron shipped, is 50 acres in extent. 7. The oldest of the public graving docks, at the Mid harbour, built in 1780, and adapted for vessels 150 feet in length and drawing 10 feet. 8. Another graving dock, at the East India harbour, 300 feet in length, 16 feet in depth and 40 feet wide on the sill. 9. The third, or Garvel dock, constructed at a cost of £120,000; it is 600 feet in length, 20 feet in depth and 60 feet in width on the sill. The water space occupied by the wet docks is 90 acres; the quays extend for a distance of 3 miles, covering an area of 100 acres, and there are three other smaller graving docks. There are also two private docks, belonging to Messrs. Harland and Wolff Limited and Scott's Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited. The various docks and warehouses being connected both with the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways, ample means are afforded of receiving goods and distributing them to all parts of the country.

The amount of Customs revenue in 1919 was £5,579,571.

In 1918 the number of sailing and steam vessels that arrived at the port of Greenock (including Port Glasgow) with cargoes, including their repeated voyages, from foreign countries and from British possessions, was 116, of 348,251 tons. The number of foreign vessels departed with cargoes and in ballast was 9, of 23,723 tons.

Of sailing and steam vessels arriving coastwise with cargoes, including their repeated voyages, there were 2,154, with a tonnage of 232,420, in the general coasting trade. In 1918 the number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," belonging to the port was 38 sailing and 126 steam, with a total tonnage of 195,263. In 1918, 117 fishing boats of a tonnage of 327, were registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894." Ten steam ships, of 32,899 tonnage, were built here during the same year. The boundaries of the port, as fixed in 1861, include part of the Clyde, and Mull, Tiree, Coll, Muck, Egg Rum, Cana and others of the western islands. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters G. K.

Among the most important industrial works here are four large shipbuilding establishments. Most of the steamers belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company have been built here. Steamboats leave this port for London, Liverpool, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, the Isle of Man, Campbelltown, Ayr, Inverness and other places in the Highlands at stated periods, and there are many others plying on the Clyde only. The steamers carrying the Irish mails are also dispatched from this port. There are several extensive engine works, marine and otherwise, and iron foundries, ropewalks, tan yards, and extensive sugar and glucose refineries, manufactories for woollen and sail cloth, and large mills for spinning wool and flax and for making paper.

New buildings were lately completed for the manufacture of torpedoes, the main body of the staff having been transferred from Woolwich.

The weekly market is held on Friday, and there are two annual fairs, one taking place on the first Thursday in July, the other on the fourth Tuesday in November, and horse and cattle markets twice a year—on the Friday before Glasgow Whit Monday fair, and on the Friday immediately preceding Kilbarchan fair.

In the vicinity are several very agreeable coast resorts, with an excellent service of steamboats.

The old town offices, taken down to make way for the new buildings, were designed in 1760 by the father of James Watt, the famous engineer, who was at that time one of the bailies of the town.

The present municipal buildings, which stand in the centre of the town, were erected from designs by Messrs. Barclay, architects, of Glasgow, at a cost of £225,000, and opened in 1882, and contain a spacious town hall, seating 2,000 persons, and the various departments connected with the Corporation and the Harbour Trust.

The County Buildings, in Nelson street west, contain the sheriff and other courts, and apartments for the necessary officers connected therewith. The district prison for males and females for Argyll, Bute and the lower district of Renfrew, formerly adjoining the court buildings, has been transferred to new buildings on the Inverkip road.

The Custom House, the north front of which faces the water, with a fine open space extending to the quay, is a building in the Classic style, erected from designs by Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh, and here the business of the customs and excise and inland revenue and the Board of Trade Mercantile Marine and Labour Exchange is transacted.

The Greenock Library (Watt Memorial), in Union street, occupies a site given for the purpose of a library by the late James Watt esq. to contain the statue of his father, and was erected from a design by Mr. Blore, architect, of London, at a cost of upwards of £7,000. Within the entrance is a statue of Watt, executed by Chantrey, at a cost of £2,000.

The Mechanics' Institute, in Sir Michael street, has also a news room and club room.

The McLean Museum, in Kelly street, presented to the town by the late James McLean, saw miller, of Greenock, was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and besides a large collection of objects of interest from all parts of the world, it contains some fine models of the large steamships built at Greenock, and other models of steam engines and sugar making machinery.

Greenock Public Library.—The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in Greenock, 14th April, 1900, and on the 22nd Oct. of the same year Dr. Andrew Carnegie's offer to present Greenock with the old Post Office buildings, in Wallace square, for its library was accepted. The property, purchased from the Improvement Trust for the sum of £8,500, has been adapted to the requirements of a public library. The lending, reference and juvenile departments contain over 30,000 volumes, and the newsroom is supplied with about 100 current newspapers and magazines.

The News Room, in William street, is also used for the meetings of the Greenock Chamber of Commerce.

The King's Theatre, in West Blackhall street, was built in 1905, at a cost of £19,000.

The Hippodrome, in West Blackhall street, a well-appointed place of amusement, was opened in 1858.

The Post Office, in Cathcart street, erected by the Government from designs by W. Robertson esq. of H.M. Office of Works, Edinburgh, at a cost of £20,000, was opened in May, 1899.

The Public Baths are in the same building as the Mechanics' Institute, the entrance being in Tobago street; the West End Baths Co. Limited have premises in Campbell street.

The Masonic Temple, in West Stewart street, was opened in 1898.

A Poor House and Lunatic Asylum, at Smithston, about a mile out of the town, was erected at a cost of over £80,000.

There are several charitable institutions, the finest of which, as a building, is Sir Gabriel Wood's Mariners' Asylum, an institution founded by the late Commissary General Sir Gabriel Wood, a native of Greenock, for the relief and comfort of aged and decayed master mariners and merchant seamen.

The Greenock Hospital and Infirmary, in Duncan street, originally erected in 1809, has since been considerably enlarged.

The Eye and Ear Infirmary, in Nelson street west, was opened in August, 1894.

The Greenock and District Combination Fever Hospital, Gateside, about 1½ miles distant from Greenock, on the Inverkip road, was erected in 1908, at a cost of about £73,000, and contains 150 beds. The buildings comprise 7 fever blocks, an administrative block, besides kitchen and laundry premises and an engineer's house &c. The nursing staff numbers 27.

The Buchanan Night Asylum, built at the cost of the late J. C. Buchanan, merchant, of Greenock, affords both food and shelter to poor persons, and there is also a Sailors' Home.

The Mid parish comprehends the central part of the town; the church, in Cathcart square, is an elegant structure, with a lofty steeple.

The East parish church is in Regent street, and there are eight other Established churches, 16 United Free churches, two Roman Catholic churches, a Reformed Presbyterian church, Baptist, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels, a Seamen's chapel and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1878, will seat 600 persons, and attached are two Mission chapels. The incumbency, gross value £390, has been held since 1915 by the Rev. Charles R. Robertson B.A. of University College, Durham.

The Cemetery, which belongs to the Corporation, is about 100 acres in extent, and is beautifully laid out.

Greenock Academy is a large establishment for both sexes, under the supervision of a rector.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank; also the Greenock Provident Bank.

Two newspapers are published here, the "Greenock Herald" (weekly) and the "Greenock Telegraph and Clyde Shipping Gazette" (3 editions of which are published daily).

The Well Park, in Regent street, is a small but well laid out recreation ground, overlooking the town, and approached from Cathcart street by a series of terraces, and on a clear day fine views of the Clyde and the Argyllshire hills may be obtained.

Wellington Park, situated near the Drumfrochar road, was formally opened June, 1872; the ground, presented to the town by the late Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. is of considerable extent; the lower and more level portion contains bowling, cricket and playing grounds, while the more elevated parts afford space for pleasant rambles, and very fine views are also here presented of the town, the Firth, and surrounding scenery. Adjoining this is another public resort called the Whin Hill, and comprising about 50 acres, upon which the Corporation have formed a golf course of 18 holes.

The Lady Alice Park, in the south-west, and the Lady Octavia Park, in the east end of the town, were gifted by the superior.

Connected with the town are various rowing, cricket and bowling clubs, all of which are well supported, and the grounds and bowling greens are kept in excellent order.

On the hills, adjoining Lyle road, is an excellent 18-hole golf course belonging to the Greenock Golf Club, with a club house at the head of Forsyth street.

Greenock was the birthplace of the illustrious James Watt LL.D., F.R.S. the perfector of the steam engine, who was born here 19 January, 1736, and died at Heathfield, Birmingham, 25 August, 1819.

John Galt, the biographer and novelist, who was born at Irvine, in Ayrshire, 2 May, 1779, lived for several years in Greenock, and dying 11 April, 1839, was buried here.

HOUSTON and KILLELAN form a united parish, which includes part of the town of Bridge of Weir; it is in the Paisley small debt court district, and is about 6 miles in length by 3 in breadth. The low grounds are in general fertile and beautified by some fine natural tracts of wood. It is bounded on the east and north by the Dargavel brook, and south by the river Gryffe.

Houston (or Houstoun) village is on the Houston burn, 14 miles west from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Paisley, and the like distance south-east from Port Glasgow, with a station 3½ miles east on the Paisley and Greenock section of the Caledonian railway, and another at Houston-Crosslee, about 2 south, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It consists of two long streets, one on each side of the rivulet. The parish church, originally of very early date, was rebuilt in 1874 by the Speirs family, and is now an edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower containing one bell; the interior contains an effigy to John Houston, dated 1456: there are sittings for 400 persons; there are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Houston Castle, an ancient mansion, now no longer extant, stood to the east of the town, and was the residence of the knightly family of Houston, but demolished in 1780 by a proprietor of the estate. Houston House, which has been considerably enlarged, is the seat of Alexander Archibald Hagart Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. and stands in a large park. The principal landowners are Sir Charles Stephen Bine Renshaw bart. B.A., D.L. and A. A. H. Spiers esq. The area of the united parish is 7,558 acres; rateable value, £22,237; population in 1911, 2,087, of which 708 are in Bridge of Weir; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,345.

About a mile hence is CROSSLEE, which has a large cotton mill, giving employment to about 100 hands. The population in 1911 was 299.

INCHINNAN is a parish and village to the north-west of Renfrew, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is watered by the rivers Clyde, Black Cart and Gryffe. At the confluence of the two latter streams is a fine bridge of ten arches, forming a communication with Renfrew; vessels navigating between Paisley and the Clyde pass this bridge by means of a canal, which is spanned by an iron swing bridge. The road from Glasgow to Greenock passes through the whole length of this parish. St. Conval, a follower of St. Mungo, is said to have built a monastic cell here A.D. 600, and subsequently a wooden church was erected, superseded during 1124-53 by a more permanent structure, successively held by the Knights Templars and Hospitallers. The old parish church was built in 1828, on a site of a church of the Knights Templars. A new church was erected in 1904 on the foundations of the old church, the total cost being defrayed by the 1st Baron Blythswood: there are sittings for 600 persons. In the churchyard is the burying-place of the Campbells, of Blythswood. Here also is a United Free church. Mai. Lord Blythswood M.V.O. is the chief landowner. Acreage, 3,347; rateable value, £10,911; population in 1911, 592.

JOHNSTONE is a town and police burgh, in the new parish of Paisley and in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 3½ miles west from Paisley, 10 west-south-west from Glasgow, 8 north-north-east from Beith and 14 south-east from Greenock, with two stations on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The Glasgow, Paisley and Johnstone canal, 11 miles in length, was opened in 1810. In the neighbourhood are two large cotton mills, a large paper mill, iron foundries, engineering, machine and tool manufactories and thread mills; near the town are iron, coal and shale mines. The town, which is lighted with gas and well supplied with water, is very regularly laid out, and has two spacious squares, one of which forms a market place. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven town councillors. There are two Established and three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, dedicated in 1874, and consecrated in 1879, has 400 sittings: the rectory, value £250, with residence, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. William Henry Edwards B.A. The burgh buildings, in Collier street, erected at a cost of £2,000, and opened 28th September, 1888, include a spacious court room, well fitted and ornamented with the arms of the burgh in relief. The Town Clerk's office and Council chamber are in the Town hall, and in the Council chamber is a full-length portrait of Sir William Milliken Napier, 9th bart. (d. 4 Feb. 1852), presented to him by his tenants, and given to the burgh by the late Sir Archibald Lennox Napier, 10th bart. (d. Jan. 18, 1907), in November, 1887: there is also a portrait of Mr. James Reid, the first town clerk of the burgh, 1857-93. The Johnstone Town Hall includes a news room and a public hall holding 1,000 people, and there are Temperance and Good Templars' halls, two hospitals, and various friendly societies in the burgh. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. A pleasure fair is held in the middle of July, and lasts for three days. George Ludovic Houstoun esq. D.L., J.P. and Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. are the chief landowners. Acreage of the burgh, 389; rateable value, £70,985; the population in 1901 was 10,503, and in 1911, 12,045, viz.: first ward, 1,696; second ward, 3,044; third ward, 2,741; fourth ward, 4,564. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 6,351.

KILMACOLM is a parish and village on the road from the Bridge of Weir to Port Glasgow, in Greenock small debt court district and Renfrewshire poor combination, 10 miles north-west from Paisley, 7 south-east from Greenock, 10½ north-west by west from Paisley and about 7 miles, in the same direction, from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The district is intersected by the Gryffe and Duchal streams. The village is lighted with gas and electricity by private companies, and extends from the Clyde into the hilly country south of Port Glasgow, and takes its name from the cell founded here by St. Columba; in later times it was the burying place of the Earls of Glencairn. The hills rise to a considerable height; one known as the Laird's Seat is 1,084 feet high, and Hyndal Hill, 1,244 feet. The parish church, built about 1826, is a plain edifice of stone, with clock tower, and has sittings for 500 persons: in the church is a memorial to the Rev. Alexander Leck, a former minister, and a brass inscribed to the Cunninghames, Earls of Glencairn, a title which became dormant on the death of John, 15th earl, 24th September, 1796; they were for many generations owners of the lands of Finlaystone in this parish, and this memorial was erected in August, 1892, by their descendant Robert Bontine Cunninghame Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore. There are also two United Free churches. The Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. There is a hydropathic establishment and sanatorium here. Duchal House, 2 miles south of the village, is the property and residence of the Right Hon. Sir Joseph Paton Maclay bart.; near it are the ruins of Duchal Castle; in the neighbourhood is Divots or the Devol Glen, containing some fine scenery and noted as being the place across which Sir William Wallace forced his horse to leap when escaping from the English. Finlaystone House is the seat of Mrs. Lilian Blakiston Houston. Mrs. Heriston and Henry Lithgow esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,594 acres; rateable value, £62,546; population of the civil parish in 1901, 4,869, and in 1911, 6,242, including 1,307 children and 142 officials and their families in the Orphan Homes of Scotland (particulars of which are given under Bridge of Weir), and 61 in the Sailors' Orphan Home, 11 inmates and 36 officials in the Consumption Sanatoria for Scotland, and 63 in the Colony of Mercy for Epileptics.

LOCHWINNOCH is a parish and town in the Paisley small debt court district, 15½ miles south-west from Glasgow, 10½ south-south-west from Paisley, 6½ south-south-west from Johnstone and 3½ north from Beith, with two stations on the Glasgow and South Western railway, Lochside station being a mile distant and Lochwinnoch station in the centre of the town. The village is situated on the north-west bank of the beautiful lake from which it derives its name, and is surrounded by scenery of a most interesting and romantic character, including the banks of the Calder, the cataract of Reekan Linn, Gurratt's Linn, the Calder Glen, and the remains of several ancient castles. The lake, which stretches north and south, lies in the eastern part of the parish; it receives the Calder water on its west side, and its issue forms the Black Cart river; it is now about 2 miles in length by 1 in breadth though formerly much more extensive, but has been divided by an embankment whereby several hundred acres of land have been reclaimed and brought into cultivation. The town is lighted with gas by a company. There are five extensive cabinet and chair manufactories, which together give employment to a large number of hands. There is also a branch here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The parish church, built about 1825, is a plain edifice of stone with a tower and spire, and affords sittings for about 750 persons. There are also two United Free churches. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Friday of each month. An annual fair, called the "Fair of Hill," is held on the first Tuesday in November (old style). Castle Semple House, on the north-west shore of the loch, occupies the site of the ancient castle of Semple, founded by Lord John Semple about 1500, but demolished in 1735. Garthland is the residence of Henry MacDowall esq. D.L., J.P. On a small island in the lake is a peel tower, the remains of some forgotten stronghold of which nothing but a vault now exists. Henry MacDowall esq. D.L., J.P. Neil Kennedy Cochran-Patrick esq. D.L., J.P. and Sir Edward Lionel Fletcher are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,459 acres; rateable value, £44,139; population in 1911, 4,254 in the civil parish and 2,959 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Post, M. O., T. & T. E. D. Office, High street (letters should have Renfrewshire added); Miss Eliza Logan, postmistress

In the neighbourhood are two bleach works. About a mile and a half nearer to Lochwinnoch, and in that parish, is the small village of NEW TOWN of BELTREES. In 1911, the population of Howwood (including Kilnow) was 1,314.

MEARNS is a parish and village, in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 7 miles south from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Paisley, and about 2 south-west from Whitecraigs station on the Glasgow and Ardrossan section of the Caledonian railway. The parish lies in the south-eastern part of the county, and is 7 miles in length by about 3 in breadth. The surface of the land is finely diversified by undulations, rising gradually from east to west; it is generally fertile. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the whole length of the parish; and a road has also been opened from Glasgow, which, passing Newton Mearns, joins the former one, near the Logans Well. The parish is irrigated by the waters of three lakes, one of which, named Black Loch, is nearly 2¼ miles in circumference. In the parish are several bleachfields. Mearns Castle, which stands on a rocky height near the village, now consists chiefly of a large square tower in a dismantled condition, but commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect; it is encompassed by a strong wall, and the entrance appears to have been once secured by a drawbridge. It belongs to Wallace Fairweather esq. Pollok Castle stands about 2 miles north-west of the village on the road to Pollokshaws. Miss Jane Dunlop Fergusson-Pollok and Wallace Fairweather esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 10,605 acres; rateable value, £32,895; population in 1911, 3,201 in the civil and 2,169 in the ecclesiastical parish.

NEWTON MEARNS (or Newton) is a village in Mearns parish, 3 miles south-west from Giffnock. Here is the parish church, an edifice of stone with a tower and spire containing a clock. The church affords 700 sittings. There is also a United Free church, and at SHEDDENS a Roman Catholic church. In the village is a sub-branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a good inn. The population in 1911 was 1,014.

PAISLEY

PAISLEY, generally supposed to have been the "Vanduara" of Ptolemy, is a town, burgh of barony and parliamentary burgh, parish, the head of a poor combination and the seat of a presbytery, in the Western division of the county. This parish was constituted, May 15, 1895, from the old parishes of the Abbey of Paisley and the Burgh of Paisley, and includes Barrhead and Johnstone police burghs; the burgh is 53 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, about 7 south-by-west from Glasgow and 17 south-east from Greenock, with a station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways and on the Glasgow and Paisley joint railway, built at a cost of £150,000. The country around Paisley (except on the north, where a wide and fertile plain known by the name of the "Carse of Renfrewshire" extends itself) is greatly diversified. The town occupies a healthy and picturesque situation on the banks of the White Cart, about 3 miles above the confluence of that river with the Clyde, and consists of two portions—the burgh, or Old Town of Paisley, on the western side of the river, and the New Town on the eastern side. The portion called the Old Town is considerably more extensive than the New, and contains all the chief warehouses of the manufacturers. Many of its streets are well built, and three of these running parallel to each other, from east to west, are of great length. The New Town occupies a level site on the eastern side of the Cart, and the entire length of both divisions can scarcely be less than 2 miles; the extreme breadth from north to south being at least 1½ miles. A ridge, forming a natural terrace, runs through the town westward from the river for nearly half a mile, terminating abruptly at a point where the Romans had a fortified camp, with which several minor stations on neighbouring eminences are believed to have had communication, these including Woodside, the Knock and Castlehead. Causeyside, one of the streets of the burgh, is also thought to indicate the former existence of a Roman road leading to or by the principal station.

Three bridges connect the Old Town with the New; the old stone bridge at the foot of High street has been widened and made to harmonise with its new neighbour; the other two, one of which is known as "Abercorn Bridge," are modern structures, and there is a single large arch carrying the railway across the river.

Between 1786 and 1791 the White Cart river was made navigable from the Clyde to the town for sloops of 40 to 50 tons burthen, at an expense of £4,000, and in 1842 attempts were made to deepen it by means of dredging machines, but it was then found impracticable. This work has, however, since been accomplished, borrowing powers for the purpose up to £100,000 having been obtained from Parliament in 1885. Commodious quays have also been erected, and the river is now navigable for vessels drawing 15 feet of water.

As a manufacturing town Paisley was in former years chiefly distinguished for the beauty of its shawls and muslins, and its extensive production of thread. The earliest fabrics made here were coarse linen checks; to these succeeded textiles of a lighter kind, such as lawns, both figured and plain. About 1760 silk gauze then took the lead, and such was the celebrity of Paisley gauze that warehouses were engaged for its sale in London, Dublin and Paris. The demand for gauze subsequently decreased, and muslin, cambric and cotton thread were made instead; the manufacture of silk and cotton shawls, scarfs and plaids composed of silk and merino wool began in 1805, and these still continue to exhibit in great perfection the ingenuity and taste of the Paisley weavers. The manufacture of cotton thread, however, is now by far the most important industry; there are also numerous bleaching and printing works, dyehouses, power loom factories, iron and brass foundries, engineers' and millwrights' shops, timber yards, soap, chemical, starch and corn flour manufactories and a tannery.

By a charter granted by James IV. in 1488, in favour of Abbot George Schaw, Paisley was created a burgh of barony. The fourth centenary of Paisley as a burgh was celebrated in August, 1888, and Her Majesty Queen Victoria, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and the late Prince Henry of Battenberg, graced the ceremony by her presence. This was the first visit of royalty to the town during the long period of 271 years.

By a proclamation under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts, 1833" (3 and 4 William IV. cc. 76-7), the town was divided into five wards, and in 1895 was again divided into eight.

The present municipal body consists of a provost, six bailies, a treasurer and sixteen councillors, with a town clerk, procurator fiscal and chamberlain. The provost and bailies act as justices of the peace.

Paisley was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

Gas was first introduced in 1824, and the works, in Blackstoun road, are now the property of the Corporation; the town is also well supplied with water.

The Town Hall, standing close to the river Cart, was erected at a cost of over £100,000, wholly defrayed by Messrs. George A., James, William and Stewart Clark, brothers, and was opened on the 30th January, 1882; the building includes a tower, containing a chime of bells playing 35 tunes, which are varied each day of the month. The fine organ was presented by Mrs. Clark, mother of the Messrs. Clark, at a cost of about £5,000.

The Municipal Buildings, formerly the County Buildings, form an embattled structure, with towers and turrets.

The county gaol, formerly a bridewell, but now used as a police station, and including a chapel erected in 1820, stands in rear of the municipal buildings, from which it is separated by two courtyards.

The County Buildings, in St. James street, next the Sheriff Court House, were opened in 1890, and are in the Classic style, from designs by Messrs. Clark and Bell, architects, of Glasgow. The edifice is two storeys in height, and has a central pedimented portico supported on columns of the Ionic order, and adorned with a frieze executed by F. W. Pomeroy esq. of London. The building contains the county hall, with committee rooms, offices for the county clerk, county road clerk, medical officer for the county, sanitary inspectors, county assessor and chief constable and head quarters for the county police, with cells; there is also a justice of the peace court hall and offices for the clerk.

The Sheriff Court House, in St. James street, erected at a cost of £15,000, and opened June 30, 1885, is an edifice in the Italian style, and includes a court hall holding about 300 persons, and rooms for the magistrates, jurors, reporters &c. There is also special accommodation for witnesses, and retiring rooms for both judge and jury, besides offices &c. for the sheriff clerk and procurator fiscal.

The Free Library and Museum was the gift to the town of the late Sir Peter Coats kt. J.P., F.R.S.E. of Woodside (d. 1890).

The Coats Observatory is in Oakshaw street.

Public reading rooms for the working classes have been established by some of the principal manufacturers in different parts of the town.

The Fever Hospital, in Bridge street, belonging to the Corporation, is under the supervision of the medical officer of health for the burgh, with a special staff of nurses; the Royal Alexandra Infirmary, in Barbour park, is also the property of the Corporation.

The Mental Hospital ward is arranged to hold 98 patients. The Paisley District Asylum is a large building occupying an elevated position on the south side of the town.

The Poorhouse, erected in 1850, in the upper part of the town, is in the Elizabethan style, and available for 650 inmates.

The Abbey church of St. James, St. Milburga and St. Mirin, is the parish church of Paisley and an extensive rural district lying around the town. The church was originally 251 feet in length, with a central tower and an elegant choir, without aisles, 123 feet long and 32 feet wide; as now existing, it consists only of the nave, with aisles, north and south transepts, and central tower, restored to a height of nearly 90 feet, north porch, with parvise, and a small but lofty chapel on the south side: within the choir lie the remains of Walter Fitzalan, the first of the Scottish Stewarts, Marjory Bruce, the two wives of King Robert II. and King Robert III. himself: over their resting place a chaste monument of Sicilian marble was placed by Her Majesty Queen Victoria in commemoration of her visit to Paisley in 1888. The extant portion of the church is of an interesting architectural character, as it displays many types of ornamental art used in the successive pre-Reformation restorations: the nave, of six bays, 93 by about 60 feet, has triforium and clerestory, and the west front is arranged in three stages; the lowermost has a recessed doorway of seven orders, flanked by blind lancets, all the arch mouldings being relieved with dogtooth ornament; in the second stage are two lofty Decorated windows, of three lights each, with Geometrical tracery; the gable is lighted by a similar window of five lights, and over it is a quatrefoil; the whole is flanked by tall and narrow buttresses and square turrets, and at the western angles of the aisle are other turrets, with spired caps: the groined roof, 82 feet high, is now concealed by a coved ceiling: under the recent restoration the rough stone walls which filled in the arches between the chapel and the south transept since the fall of the central tower in 1549, have been removed, and the chapel forms part of the church, as it did originally. The windows are mostly filled with stained glass, and include memorial windows to Mr. John Polson, to the families of Clark, Coats and Arthur, as well as to the Hamiltons, Dukes of Abercorn, and to the Cathcart, Shaw-Stewart and other noble families. The choir, central tower and cloisters are now (1921) being restored.

The High church, which stands on a fine eminence called Church hill, laid out on its northern slope in gardens, was built in 1754 at a cost of £1,600, and renovated in 1877 at an expense of £1,000: an organ was provided in 1898, at a cost of about £2,150: it will seat 1,313 persons.

St. George's church, built in 1820, at a cost of £6,183, was renovated in 1894, and has sittings for 1,300 persons.

The North church, in Love street, built in 1834 and rebuilt in 1883, is a plain building of stone in the Gothic style, and has sittings for 725 persons.

The Middle parish church, on Church hill, built in 1781, was renovated in 1885, and affords 870 sittings.

St. Columba's or the Gaelic church, in Oakshaw street, is a very plain stone building erected in 1793, and will seat 444 persons.

The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1833, will seat 325 persons: the Rev. Charles Leonard Weatherburn M.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1910. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Barnabas, erected in 1893, affords 350 sittings: the Rev. Archibald Forrest is priest in charge.

The Thomas Coats Memorial Baptist church, in High street, was erected in memory of Thomas Coats esq. a local philanthropist.

There are also United Free, Roman Catholic, Reformed Presbyterian and Wesleyan Methodist churches and Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels and Salvation Army barracks.

The Technical College and School of Art, erected in George street, at a cost of over £25,000, was designed by Mr. T. G. Abercrombie, architect, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, and exhibits a façade 120 feet in length, and three storeys high, arranged as a central block with slightly advanced wings, and an open lantern of several stages, rising from the ridge of the roof. On the ground floor are a large vestibule, board room, principal and art masters' rooms and offices, as well as accommodation for the School of Art. The rest of the building is occupied by class rooms for science, engineering and technology. The courses of study include classes for Matriculation and the Intermediate and Final Examinations for the Science and Engineering Degrees of the London University. Adjoining the main building is the W. B. Barbour wing, in which are situated a physical laboratory, three chemical laboratories &c.

The John Neilson Educational Institution, Oakshawhead, richly endowed by the late John Neilson esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1852, and is a massive structure, occupying an elevated site, and surmounted by a lofty dome.

The Camphill Public School, situated on an eminence, is the largest elementary school in Scotland, and will hold 1,900 scholars.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. There is also a Savings Bank, which occupies premises in High street, Wellmeadow street and Neilston road.

The Fountain Gardens, the gift of the late Thomas Coats esq. of Ferguslie House, extending between Love street and Caledonia street, comprise six acres of ground, tastefully laid out, with a large ornamental fountain in the centre, and a smaller one at each of the four angles of the gardens.

Brodie Park was originally a farm of 26 acres, bequeathed to the Town Council of Paisley many years ago by the late Mr. Brodie.

Races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. This ground, comprising 40 acres, has, by Act of Parliament, become the property of the community, and is now named St. James's Park.

The weekly market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays in February and May and the second Thursday in August and November respectively. Feorday and August are the principal for cattle; August fair and races take place at the same date and last for two days. Those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants.

Two newspapers are published in Paisley, viz., the "Express," daily, and the "Paisley and Renfrewshire Gazette," weekly.

Alexander Wilson, the celebrated writer on American ornithology, was born here in 1766, and died 23 August, 1813; Robert Tannahill, a weaver and lyric poet, was also a native of Paisley, where he was born 3 June, 1774: he was the author of several still popular ballads, but died by his own act, 17 May, 1810. Here also, 19 May, 1785, was born the celebrated John Wilson, best known as Christopher North, and famous both as a critic, essayist and wit; he was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he took his degree, and also carried off various University honours, including, in 1806, the Newdigate prize for English verse, besides highly distinguishing himself in athletic contests. In 1820 he became professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, but his chief reputation rests on the "Noctes Ambrosianæ," a series of papers contributed to Blackwood's Magazine (1822-35); he died at Edinburgh, 3 April, 1854. Dr. John Witherspoon, long the minister of one of the parishes here, wrote several of his best theological works in Paisley prior to his emigration in 1768 to America, where he became president of the college at Princeton, where he died 15 November, 1794.

The mitred abbey of Paisley was founded in the year 1163 by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Alan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum. It was originally a Cluniac priory, colonised from the abbey of Much or Great Wenlock, in Shropshire, and dedicated to SS. James, Milburga and Mirinus, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey and its lands erected into a regality by James II. the abbot being constituted lord thereof. Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, surrounded the abbey precincts with a lofty wall of brown stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished, but a portion still remains, and there exists a rhyming inscription setting forth Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription, once on a tablet in the wall, is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. The monastic church is now the parish church of New Paisley: there were cloisters on the south side 60 feet square, but the domestic buildings have largely disappeared.

In 1560, after the Reformation, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claud Hamilton, third son of James, 2nd Earl of Arran, and Duke of Chatelherault, in France, on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley in 1652. The abbey lands were transferred from James, 2nd Earl of Abercorn and grandson of Claud, Baron Paisley, to the Earl of Angus, and from him passed in 1653 to Lord Dundonald, but the greater portion became the property, by purchase in 1764, of John James, 9th Earl and 1st Marquess of Abercorn, who eventually let it on building leases; so that the park, orchard and gardens of the abbey subsequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the materials of the monastery were used in the erection of the houses.

Ferguslie Park, the seat of Sir Thomas Glen Glen-Coats bart. C.B., V.D. Lord Lieutenant of the County, and Hawkhead House, now the property of the Paisley District Lunacy Board, are in this parish.

The area of the newly constituted parish is 16,838 acres; population in 1911, 109,782; rateable value, £746,995. Area of the burgh, 3,487 acres; rateable value, £452,753. The population of the burgh in 1901 was 99,899, and in 1911, 109,782, viz.: burgh, 84,455; Barrhead burgh, 1,509; Johnstone burgh, 12,045; landward, 11,773.

The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 8,084; second, 11,038; third, 12,074; fourth, 9,959; fifth, 13,319; sixth, 7,361; seventh, 15,291; eighth, 7,289.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Abbey, 15,781; Greenlaw, 12,531; High Church, 10,053; Low Church, 6,684; Martyrs, 12,253; Middle, 7,480; North, 7,695; St. Columba, 4,908; South Church, 10,060.

Included in the total population was 162 patients and 66 officials in the Royal Alexandra Infirmary; 115 in the Industrial School; 114 in Kibble Reformatory for Boys; 34 officials and 507 inmates of the Paisley Poorhouse; 307 inmates and 28 officials in Renfrewshire Combination Poorhouse; 30 officials and 175 inmates of the Paisley District Asylum; 262 inmates and 42 officials in Renfrew District Mental Hospital, and 268 inmates and 18 officials in Nazareth House for Orphans and Aged People.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 39,178.

POLLOKSHAWS, see GLASGOW.

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport, and parish, town and police burgh, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, 20 miles north-west from Glasgow and 3 east from Greenock, with a station on the Greenock section of the Caledonian railway. It formerly belonged to the parish of Kilmacolm, but in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district. The town, which partly stands on the old barony of Newark, is neatly and regularly built; the streets run at right angles to each other and are lighted with gas. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and the lower grounds in the vicinity of the town have many good houses. The harbours are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, which has been extended and improved at a very considerable cost, and there is also a wet dock. The number of vessels entering and clearing the port are included with the Greenock returns. The number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31st, 1918, was 8, with an aggregate tonnage of 2,584. Connected with the town are eight shipbuilding establishments, some of which are upon an extensive scale and employ many hands. In 1918 18 vessels were built of 63,813 tons. There are also saw mills, roperies, sail cloth factories and engineering and sail making works. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven councillors, with a town clerk and other officers. A burgh police court sits every Monday and Thursday and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Port Glasgow, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," is included in the Western division of the county for parliamentary purposes. Port Glasgow parish church, erected upon the site of the old one, is a purely modern structure. The Town House, erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000, is a structure in the Classic style, and has a tower with spire 150 feet in height, and containing a clock; the interior includes a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the town clerk and other public officers. The Town Hall, in Princes street, is a large stone building, used for public meetings &c. and contains an organ given in 1902 by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. The Moffat Library is an elegant building at the north end of King street, erected in 1887 from part of a bequest left by the late James Moffat, merchant, Port Glasgow, and comprises, besides the library, reading, billiard and smoking rooms. Broadstone Jubilee Hospital was built in 1907 and contains 23 beds. The Carnegie Park Orphan Homes, at the east end of the town, and erected from the same bequest, were built at a cost of about £7,000.

There is an annual fair, which takes place on the first Thursday in July, and continues for three days. Birkmyre Park, consisting of 9 acres, presented to the town by the late William Birkmyre esq. M.P. and situated at Glen Huntly, was opened in July, 1895, and includes two bowling greens, a football field and a quoit pitch. Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. C.B., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish comprises 1,018 acres; rateable value of the whole parish, £108,297; area of burgh, 585 acres; the population of the parish in 1901 was 16,888, and the burgh, 16,857; and in 1911, parish 17,775, burgh 17,749; the population of the wards in 1911 was, First, 5,498; Second, 4,772; Third, 4,405; Fourth, 3,074; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 10,685.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 8,304.

NEWARK is a quoad sacra parish erected out of that of Port Glasgow. The ancient castle of Newark, formerly occupied by the Maxwells of Pollok, is now the property of His Majesty's Board of Works, having been transferred to them by Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. C.B., J.P. and Vice-Lieut. of Renfrewshire, as representative of the Maxwells of Pollok and Springkell; the ruins are well preserved, and from the site a fine view is obtained of the Clyde and its adjacent scenery, particularly the wild and singularly-formed rocky eminence on which stands the castle of Dumbarton. Population in 1911, 4,016.

RALSTON now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.

RANFURLY, see BRIDGE OF WEIR.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh and the capital of the county, and a parish in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is 50 miles west from Edinburgh, 13 east-by-south from Port Glasgow, 6 west from Glasgow, and 3 north from Paisley; a short distance from the Clyde, and 1 mile east from the White Cart; the parish lying on both banks of the Clyde. The town, which has four stations, two on the Glasgow and South-Western railway and two on the Glasgow and Renfrew District railway, consists of three good streets, from which several smaller ones issue, and it is well lighted with gas. There are two extensive shipbuilding yards, with a dock capable of accommodating vessels of large burthen, and also a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels frequenting the river may discharge and load with as great facility as at Glasgow. The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew railway is connected with this wharf, at which passengers to and from the river steamers navigating the Clyde arrive, and here goods are also shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish and other boats. Renfrew received its first charter from Robert III. in 1396, and in 1614 James VI. granted a charter for a school; it also gives the title of baron to the Prince of Wales. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A magistrate's court sits every alternate Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. The Brown Institute, in Canal street, was presented to the town by Andrew Brown esq. The parish church, built in 1862, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, erected in the form of a Greek cross, and has a tower with a tall and graceful spire. Within the church lie two stone figures of Sir John Ross, of Hawkhead, and his wife, and on one of the walls is a marble tablet to the late Archibald Douglas Campbell esq. of Blythswood (d. 1868): a brass has also been erected by the Rt. Hon. James Parker Smith P.C. to his father and grandfather, and there is a marble tablet to the late Rev. Robert Stephen, for 39 years minister. The Established church affords sittings for 1,050 persons. Walter Stewart built a castle here, on an eminence called Castlehill, by the margin of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewart family, long ere they ascended the Scottish throne. There are besides United Free and Roman Catholic churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels, an Evangelistic Hall and Salvation Army Barracks. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Margaret is in Fulbar street. The Victory Baths, Inchinnan road, erected in 1921, were presented to the town by Sir F. and Lady Lobnitz. On 22 April, 1907, the town was visited by T. M. King George V. and Queen Mary, then the Prince and Princess of Wales, being on their way to open the new buildings of Glasgow, and received an address from the provost and council, afterwards proceeding to Blythswood. Blythswood, the seat of Maj. Lord Blythswood M.V.O., J.P. is situated on the banks of the Clyde in this parish. Lord Blythswood M.V.O., J.P. Alexander Archibald Hagart Speirs esq. J.P. the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and James Gordon Oswald esq. are the chief landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,248 acres; of the burgh, 1,590 acres: assessable value, £210,711. The population in 1901 was 15,142, and in 1911, 27,434, of which 12,565 was in the parliamentary and royal burgh.

The population of the wards in 1911 was: first or Meadowside, 2,028; second or Blythswood, 2,766; third or Townhead, 2,372; fourth or Moorpark, 5,399.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 12,926.

THE COUNTY OF ROSS AND CROMARTY

THIS is a large county in the north of Scotland, and includes the districts of Easter and Wester Ross, Ardmeanach or the Black Isle, and four-fifths of the Island of Lewis, and the former county of Cromarty: this last, being formed of scattered portions within and adjoining Ross, was, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, united for all purposes with the county of Ross. The present outline is irregular and the boundaries on the east and west sides touch the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean: the west coast of the Mainland is much indented with bays and lochs, and its actual water boundary is the North Minch, the strait which divides it from the Isle of Lewis. On the north and north-east the county of Sutherland forms the boundary as far as Dornoch Firth, from there southwards to the Beauly basin the North Sea and Moray Firth constitute the eastern boundary, and thence Inverness with the Isle of Skye extend around the south and south-west borders: the Ross portion of the Isle of Lewis being bounded by Harris, the portion of the island belonging to Inverness on the south, the North Minch on the east and the Atlantic on the north and west: the portion of the Isle of Lewis belonging to the county measures 40 miles from north to south by 25 in breadth, while the part belonging to the Mainland extends from east to west 67 miles and from north to south 58 miles. It comprises an area of 1,977,428 acres of land and 72,974 of water, and in point of size ranks as the third, and in population as the twelfth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1901 was 76,450 and in 1911, 77,364, viz.: males, 38,763, and females, 38,601. The inhabited houses being in 1901, 16,042, and in 1911, 16,118 inhabited, 949 uninhabited and 89 building.

Of the early history of this county but little is known: it was at the time the Romans came to these parts inhabited by three tribes, the principal of which, the Caledonii, must have been a part of a larger Sept, as the name occurs in other districts in 1135. There was an Earl of Ross, but this title early became extinct.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western; a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall, is loamy clay, the rest being light soil of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation, where they appear in continuous chains from north-west to south-east, and the lochs necessarily follow the same direction. The most lofty mountains are Ben Dearg, 3,547 feet; More, 3,505; Teallach, 3,474; Wyviss, 3,429; Alton, 3,383; Slioch, 3,217; Eag, 3,160; Fin, 3,060 and Ben Alligin, 3,015, besides which, on the confines of Ross and Inverness, is Main Soul, 3,862. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long, dreary, cold winters and some very hot summer weather, and the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of firwood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted, and large additions have been in progress for many years. The deer forests of Ross are forty-eight in number, and extend over 835,545 acres, and the shootings are a source of profit to the proprietors. The improvements effected in farming have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland, 1920," are: Oats, 32,769 acres; barley, including bere, 9,681; wheat, 779; rye, 515; the total corn crops being 43,818 acres; turnips and swedes, 14,916 acres; potatoes, 7,364; mangolds, 18; cabbage, 79; rape, 98; vetches or tares for seed, 39; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 223: rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover (for hay), 14,147 acres; pasture (not for hay), 30,713. Total area of land, 1,977,248 acres; the mountain and heath land being 975,943; permanent grass, 25,184; arable land, 111,779.

The live stock in 1920 comprised: 5,421 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 21; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,132; under one year, 449; cows in milk, 13,914; in calf, but not in milk, 1,441; heifers in calf, 1,205; other cattle, two years and above, 6,368; one year and under two, 8,062: under one year, 7,953; ewes kept for breeding, 110,330; other sheep, one year and above, 57,541; under one year, 87,865; sows kept for breeding, 371; other pigs, 2,151.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 3,368; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 2,284; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 398; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 238; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 137; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 92; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 108; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 128; above 300 acres, 81; total, 6,834.

The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little commercial value. Sandstone occurs in several localities, 230 tons being raised in 1919, and 1,040 tons of gravel and sand.

The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings has of late years become uncertain. At Ullapool in 1918 there were 413 boats registered under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," of 1,137 tons. There are no manufactures of any importance, but in the neighbourhood of Dingwall, Invergordon and Tain several extensive distilleries are established.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conan, fed by the Orrin, Meig, Sheen, Farnich and Blackwater, which flows into the Cromarty Firth, and the Aultgraat and Alness, which have the same outlet, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Firth. The river Ewe, on the west coast, has a short course from Loch Maree, and the Broom river falls into Loch Broom. The Conan and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some falls of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Grienord, Loch Ewe, Gair Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keeshorn, Loch Carron and Loch Alsh, with its inner southerly arm, Loch Duich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them save Loch Maree, near the west coast, are of much magnitude or beauty. The Highland railway enters the county at Beauly in the south-east, runs north to Dingwall, whence a branch passes west-by-south round the north of Loch Luichart, up the Sheen water and along Glen Carron to the south part of Loch Carron, where Kyle of Lochalsh is the terminus, and from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis; the main line continues from Dingwall along the north side of the Cromarty Firth to Invergordon, whence it turns north to Tain and by the south of Dornoch Firth to Culrain, where it leaves the county and proceeds to Golspie &c.; from the Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh section is a short line to Strathpeffer, and from Muir of Ord on the main line is a branch to Fortrose; the scenery through which the line passes is very fine and varied; there is also a short branch from Dingwall to Strathpeffer Spa.

Lewis has some mountains, 1,200 to 1,700 feet, in the south and south-west portion of that section of the island, also an inland loch, Langabhat, about 8 miles long, and numerous inlets or "sen" lochs, the largest being Loch Boag on the west coast. There is a good harbour at Stornoway, sheltered from the north-east by the Eye peninsula. The principal industry is sheep breeding.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The county contains 33 entire and parts of 2 civil parishes and 42 entire and parts of 3 ecclesiastical parishes; it has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain and Fortrose, one municipal borough, Cromarty, and two police burghs, Invergordon and Stornoway. Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," the shire of Ross and Cromarty forms a division of Inverness-shire, Ross and Cromarty for parliamentary purposes, and returns one member to Parliament.

ALNESS is a parish in the eastern half of the county, and a small village, partly in this parish and partly in that of Rosskeen, 3 miles south-west from Invergordon and about 10 from Dingwall, situated on both sides of the Averon (which river separates the two parishes), the part of the village lying in Rosskeen parish being known as Bridge End of Alness. The parish is bounded on the east by Cromarty Firth and Rosskeen, on the south and west by Kiltearn, and on the north by Rosskeen, and is about 20 miles in length, with a mean breadth of about 5 miles. There is a station here on the Inverness and Wick section of the Highland railway. Alness is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and Bridge End in that of Tain. There are Established and United Free churches about half a mile west of the village, and the latter has been rebuilt at a cost of £1,100. The production of whisky is carried on extensively in two distilleries. Iron and silver ores have been found in this neighbourhood. Teaninich House is the seat of Capt. Almeric Stuart John Munro-Spencer, and Dalmore, that of Andrew Mackenzie esq. J.P. Viscount Novar P.C., G.C.M.G., S. C. Munro esq. and C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. are the principal landowners. CROMARTY

CROMARTY is a burgh, seaport and small parish at the entrance to the Cromarty Firth, an inlet of Moray Firth, and in the parliamentary division of Ross and Cromarty. The town, which stands on a promontory on the south side of the strait leading into the fine harbour formed by Cromarty Firth, is situated 19½ miles north-east from Inverness, 17 north-west from Nairn, 11 south from Tain, 9 north-by-east from Fortrose, 7 east, by water, from Invergordon, a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway, and 10 from the terminus of the Inverness, Muir of Ord and Fortrose railway. The harbour, formed by the Cromarty Firth, is one of the safest on the East Coast, the entrance being well protected by two headlands, known as the North and South Soutors; it was known to the Romans as the "Portis Salutis," and is capable of holding a large fleet, and the bay presents good facilities for bathing. White fishery is carried on to some extent in this quarter. In 1920 about 118 fishing boats of 754 tonnage were engaged in the Cromarty district, giving employment to 697 men and boys. The total value of the fish landed was about £18,327. The burgh is controlled by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. In 1921 it was lighted by electricity; there is an excellent supply of water obtained from springs three miles distant, and a modern system of water and sewer sanitation is installed. The parish church, built in pre-Reformation days, stands at the east of the town: the records of the Kirk session date from 1678. There is also a United Free church and an Episcopal church. The Town Hall, an ancient building, in Church street, contains an old bell believed to be one of the many captured by Sir Charles L. Ross, of Balnagown, during the French war, and presented to several northern towns. The Cottage Hospital for Cromarty, Nigg, Resolis and Rosemarkie was opened in 1894. In the burgh is a good public hall, erected by the inhabitants of Cromarty as a drill hall and place for entertainments. Land has been acquired (1921) by the burgh, and is being laid out as a recreation and pleasure ground. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Beneath the South Soutor is a chasm, called "Charlie's Seat," and a petrifying stream called the "Dropping Cave," but now (1921) the sites of both are in the occupation of the Admiralty, and are closed to the public. Near the North Soutor are several sunken rocks, termed the "Kings' Sons," so named from the tradition of three kings' sons having been drowned near these rocks when on their way from Denmark, and to their memory were erected three obelisks, one in the parish of Nigg and two in the parish of Fearn. On an eminence immediately behind the town is a column 40 feet high, surmounted by a full-sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller (d. 1856), the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," who was a native of Cromarty. Mr. Handyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh, was the sculptor, and the monument was erected by public subscription in 1860, at a cost of £1,500. In the house in which Hugh Miller was born, 1802, is a small museum of fossils &c. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an Act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitation of Sir John Urquhart, a former proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; the present proprietor is Brig.-Gen. Sir Walter Charteris Ross K.B.E., C.B., C.M.G., D.L., J.P. of Cromarty House. The area of the parish comprises 8,018 acres; burgh, 139 acres; rateable value, burgh £4,225; landward £5,069 9s. 8d.; the population in 1911 was 5,637, of which 1,928 were in the burgh, and including 3,999 men of the Royal Navy.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 732.

DINGWALL is the county town of Ross and Cromarty, and a parish, royal burgh and market town, 178 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh, 21 north-west from Inverness, 20 south-west from Cromarty, 13 south-west from Invergordon and 9 north from Beauly, with a station at the junction of the Inverness and Thurso and Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh sections of the Highland railway. The town consists chiefly of one main street and several smaller ones, and is situated in the eastern part of Rossshire, on a fertile plain near the western extremity of the Forth of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town, and about three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier or jetty, for vessels discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II. and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors. Water is supplied from springs above the town and gas from works in Tulloch street, and the town is also lighted by electricity from works at Glenskaich. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than at present, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. With the exception of a distillery, there are no manufactories or large works. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, was entirely rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1905. The Carnegie Free Library, adjoining the Town House, was erected in 1903. In the High street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The Established church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. Near the church is an obelisk, 57 feet in height, erected in 1703 to Sir George Mackenzie bart. and first Earl of Cromartie, who died 17 Aug. 1714, and, in accordance with his last injunction, was buried here. The Episcopal church, in Castle street, originally built in 1797 and rebuilt in 1872 after being destroyed by fire, contains several fine stained windows and a handsome organ: it affords 128 sittings, and has attached St. Anne's Mission church at Strathpeffer. The Roman Catholic church, in the same street, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was opened July 29, 1902. The old Free church, in the same street, is now occupied as offices by the "Ross-shire Journal" newspaper. The new Free church, built by the late Rev. Dr. John Kennedy, is in High street; it is a handsome edifice, and has seats for 1,000 people. The United Free church, erected in 1909, in Castle street, has 500 sittings. The Free Presbyterian church is in Greenhill terrace. The Ross Memorial Hospital, in Ferry road, is a small stone building, erected in 1873. A little to the east of the town stand the County Buildings, completed in 1845, at a cost of £5,000, and containing a county room, a sheriff court room and county clerk's and other offices, together with a prison; here the County Council meet. On Mitchell hill is a square tower, of Mediæval character and 100 feet high, erected as a national memorial to the late Brig.-Gen. Sir Hector Archibald Macdonald K.C.B., D.S.O., A.D.C. (d. 1903), whose birthplace is within a few miles of Dingwall, at a cost of about £3,000, and inaugurated May 23rd, 1907, by the Marquess of Tullibardine M.V.O., D.S.O. A memorial cross of pink granite has been erected at the top of High street by the officers, non-commissioned officers and men, past and present, of the Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs), The Duke of Albany's Regt. to their comrades who died in South Africa 1899-1902. There is an extensive distillery owned by the Fertintosh Distillery Co. Limited. Tulloch Castle is the seat of Mrs. Davidson. The market is held every Wednesday. Mrs. Davidson, Lord Seaforth D.L., J.P. and William Dalziel Mackenzie M.A., D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,465 acres; burgh, 452 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £15,446, and of the landward portion of the parish, £4,222; total, £19,668; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,898, including 2,639 in the burgh. FORTROSE is a small town and royal burgh in the parliamentary division of Ross and Cromarty, and quoad sacra parish, formed out of the parish of Rosemarkie; it is 10 miles north from Inverness, 21 south from Tain and 18 north-north-east from Beauly, situated on the southern slopes of the Black Isle, on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Firth, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant 2½ miles. In November, 1893, a branch line of the Highland railway was opened, commencing at Muir of Ord, and having its terminus at Fortrose, which has advantages for sea-bathing. James II. in 1445 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighbouring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. It reverted to the Crown at the Reformation, and was in consequence enfranchised and erected into an independent royal burgh in 1590, and again annexed to Rosemarkie in 1592 under the name of the Royal Burgh of Fortrose. The burgh is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and nine councillors. The Bishopric of Ross was founded by King David I. between the years 1124 and 1128, but in 1762 was united to Caithness, and in 1769 to Moray, and is now part of the consolidated diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness, formed in 1864. The cathedral here, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Boniface, is an edifice of red sandstone, in the purest form of the Decorated style, and consisted, when entire, of choir with aisles, nave of four bays with aisles, western tower, quasi-transepts, lady chapel, crypt and chapter house, but the only portions now standing are the south aisle of the chancel and nave and the detached chapter house: in the aisle are several ancient tombs of the 14th century, and a piscina. There are Established, United Free and Free churches. The United Free church, built in 1898 at a cost of about £5,000, is a handsome building of red sandstone with spire. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1828, affords 240 sittings: the rectory, net value £230, has been held since 1921 by the Rev. Frederic Carlisle Burton F.R.G.S. Attached is the Mission station of Cromarty. The town has an excellent harbour, built by the parliamentary commissioners, and a jetty about 250 yards in length, erected at a cost of £3,000, which is now (1921) in need of reconstruction. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland in the town, which depends for its prosperity on agriculture and fishing, and all its advantages as a summer and seaside resort. The Academy is one of the oldest foundations in the north of Scotland; the first recorded schoolmaster was John Macgillichalum in 1587. After passing through many vicissitudes, Sir James MacKintosh K.C. a former pupil, was largely instrumental in re-establishing it on a sound basis by the raising of subscriptions in India. The provost, magistrates and town council granted to themselves a charter of Novodamus in 1864. The present building was erected in 1893 at a cost of £2,000 and was further extended in 1914-15, and is now under the control of the County Education Authority: a playing field was acquired in 1921. The area of the royal burgh is 523 acres: rateable value, £5,246; population in 1911, 970; ecclesiastical parish, 583. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 592.

INVERGORDON is a police burgh and seaport town in the parish of Rosskeen and Eastern district of the county, 12 miles south-south-west from Tain, 13 north-north-east from Dingwall and 4¼ west from Cromarty, with a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway; it lies on the northern point of the entrance to the inner or narrower portion of Cromarty Firth. There is steamer communication from the town to Cromarty and a pier was erected in 1821 at the expense of the county and the Government, so that boats could land their passengers at any time of the tide. The late proprietor, R. B. Æ. M'Leod esq. of Cadboll, at his own expense constructed a harbour in 1828. In 1857 and later dates, large wooden piers were built extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London &c. coming alongside; the extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863 has diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is very commodious and safe, and has good anchorage. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The United Free church is a handsome cruciform edifice, with a tower and spire about 140 feet in height. In High street there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The Town Hall, also in the High street, opened in April, 1871, is a building in the Italian style, with a pediment displaying a figure of Neptune, accompanied by various symbolical sculptures. The Y. M. C. A. Naval Institute, in Outram street, erected at a cost of about £4,500, was opened in April, 1915, and consists of a large dining room, social room with two billiard tables and social or concert hall, kitchen and sculleries and 50 cubicles. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town, but the principal industry at present is a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, which together with the timber yards give employment to a number of workpeople. The principal hotel is the "Royal," in High street. In 1864 the town was taken under the provisions of the Lindsay Police Act. The area of the burgh is 99 acres; rateable value, £8,480; population in 1911, 1,051.
